German Troops Deployed Along Polish-Slovak Line When Nazis Ripen Time to Take Over Danzig

Chancellor Rips Another Pact Apart

BRATISLAVA, Slovakia, Aug. 19. — The German army tightened its "protective" grip on Slovakia today with measures described by a Bratislava broadcast announcement last night as "military possession".

German troops were deployed along the Polish-Slovak frontiers for at least 100 miles—a far greater zone than that fixed by treaty last March when Germany guaranteed Slovakia's independence for 25 years.

(In Berlin, it could not be confirmed that Germany had taken "military possession" of Slovakia, but quarters close to the foreign office indicated there had been no change in German recognition of Slovak sovereignty.)

Soldiers of the Reich were reported moving in large numbers through the High Tatras, the mountainous stronghold of northeast Slovakia which is regarded by military strategists as the back door to Poland.

Tens of thousands of German troops were observed in the vicinity of Zilina, near the northwest termination of the Polish frontier.

Bratislava, the capital, at the southwest tip of Slovakia, apparently remained under formal Slovak authority, but the rich Vag valley and the northern borderland admittedly were controlled by the German military command.

SIR MALCOLM BREAKS WATER SPEED RECORD

CONISTON, Eng., Aug. 19.—Sir Malcolm Campbell shattered all existing speed records on water when he roared over Lake Coniston today in an average time of 141.74 miles an hour for two trips along the measured mile.

Bluebird II, with the old engine which the late Sir Henry Seagrave used seven years ago, hit its top speed on the south run when Campbell was clocked at 142.85. He came back in 140.62.

When Bluebird went past the last buoy, Sir Malcolm tore off his goggles and pushed up his thumb to show he felt the record had been broken.

GLASSY SMOOTH

Campbell had everything in his favor. The lake was glassy smooth. By the time they carried him out to the waiting Bluebird the mist had risen. He warmed up his motor about a minute, gave her the gun and came up the lake to glory.

Later Sir Malcolm said:

"There is no question of the im-

WHEAT KING SHIPS GRAIN BY AIRLINE

VANCOUVER, Aug. 19—What is believed to be the first shipment of grain by air is scheduled to arrive here next Wednesday from Hedman Trelle, oft-crowned world wheat king of Wembley Alta.

Trelle is sending a 100-pound sack of No. 1 grade wheat to the Vancouver branch Monkman Pass Highway Association, as his contribution to funds for building the highway.

The highway is being constructed by volunteer labor and funds to connect the Peace River districts of Alberta and British Columbia and provide a coast outlet for the Alberta district.

ANGLO-RUSSIA, FRENCH TALKS STRIKE SNAGS

Various Differences Arise Among Military Staff Leaders

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—Various differences apparently have arisen among British, French and Russian military leaders' staff talks, it was disclosed today.

The disclosure came about circuitously in Moscow morning papers in the form of a communique by Tass, the official news agency. It denied Polish reports differences had arisen over an alleged Soviet demand for Anglo-French military assistance in case of war in the Far East.

These Polish reports, the communique said, were "complete fantasies from beginning to end."

It then added: "The real discordances actually existing concern a quite different question having no relation whatever to the Far East."

On the basis of the fact that various differences arose during the previous diplomatic negotiations in connection with "indirect aggression" in the Baltic states, some observers are inclined to believe a snag in the military talks has arisen over the question of Soviet military intervention in Finland, Esthonia or Latvia in event of such "indirect aggression."

CITY POLICE WATCHING FOR SLICK CROOK

City police have received a request from American authorities to be on the look-out for one of the slickest, most accomplished international crooks ever to skin an unsuspecting sucker out of his shirt and shoes.

The smoothie is known as Walter E. Tobey, "The Velvet Kid," as well as the following aliases: George Allen, Walter G. Brown, George C. Cole, Everett Daly, George E. Evans, Walter Tobey. His record included convictions as a confidence man, bunco artist, pickpocket, wire tapper, dope fiend and dealer, ball jumping and jail breaking. It covers a 39-year period and he is known to police from Quebec to Corpus Christi.

At the present time he is wanted in connection with an indictment for fraudulent use of the mails as a result of an amazing confidence game operated from Mexico City in which he netted $74,000. He jumped bail of $15,000 and $75,000 and disappeared from Philadelphia on June 21, this year in company with a 19-year-old girl. He is believed to be driving a tan coupe and is thought to have come into western Canada in order to escape detection in the States.

A. F. L. Fails In Actors' Dispute

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 19—Efforts of the American Federation of Labor to settle a jurisdictional dispute among actors' unions blew up last night, with President William Green of the A.F.L. announcing they would not be resumed until the federation holds its national convention in Cincinnati next October.

Britons Closely Eye Balkans: Poles Lose Might Say Nazis

LONDON, Aug. 19. — Great Britain eyed the Balkans carefully as a growing danger spot today while holding firmly to an attitude of calm resolve in the face of grave European developments. Government circles were said to have expected the announced German "military possession of Slovakia" as a natural strategic move.

Tacticians pointed out that Germany, by having troops based in Slovakia, on Hungary's northern border, could exert greater pressure on Budapest for co-operation in war. It also was pointed out that German military forces in Slovakia would strengthen Germany's south - eastern flank in case of war against Poland.

Britain still is watching the Danzig dispute closely, but now is regarding this and her guarantees to support Poland in the light of the new situation developing in the Balkans.

Meanwhile, big German purchases of copper and rubber were reported on London markets, sending prices upward.

Copper rose 18 shillings, nine pence (about $4.38) to 44 pounds, 5 shillings, nine pence (about $208) a ton. Rubber mounted 3-16 pence to 8¼ pence (about 17 cents) a pound.

It was said Germany bought more than 10,000 tons of copper and 17,000 tons of rubber in London this month for delivery in late August or early September.

JUG M'SPADEN MAINTAINS HIS 3-STROKE LEAD

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Aug. 19. — Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., maintained his three-stroke lead in the Canadian open golf championship today despite a third-round 73, three over par, that left him with a 54-hole total of 209.

With a grand chance to overtake the Jug, burly Ralph Guldahl, of Madison, N.J., blew his chances with an outgoing nine of 36 and a round of 73 for a total of 212, good enough for second place on young Stan Horne of Montreal, the leading Canadian with 213.

Horne had a steady round of 72, two over par, and chopped off one of the strokes Guldahl and McSpaden had on him at the start of the day. Arthur Hulbert of Toronto, tied with Horne before, slipped back to 214, with a 73. The Toronto pro was tied for fourth with E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., whose 71 this morning was beaten only by par 70's from Lex Robson of Toronto and Horton Smith of Oak Park, Ill.

Robson, however, was too far back with 149 at the start of the

ENGLAND GETS 284 RUNS FOR FIVE WICKETS

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Playing on a batman's wicket, England was dismissed for 352 runs at the Oval today in the opening day's play of the third and final cricket test with the West Indies. In half-an-hour's batting near the close the tourists lost one wicket for 27 runs.

LONDON, Aug. 19—England batted strongly against the West Indies in the opening day's play of the final match of the current three-game test series at the Oval today and at the tea interval had compiled 284 runs for five wickets. Thirteen thousand spectators saw the afternoon play.

Batting in the first international match, Norman Oldfield made 80 runs before he was bowled by Learie Constantine with a spinner. The young Lancastrian gave a flawless display marked by late cuts and strong leg drives. Leonard Hutton, who opened the innings with William Keeton, Nottinghamshire, obtained 73.

At tea, Joseph Hardstaff and Morris Nichols were associated. The former had scored 54 not out and his colleague four.

Fight Is Reply To Demands

WARSAW, Aug. 19—Political quarters, echoed by newspapers, answered German demands for a solution of the Danzig problem today with the reaffirmation that Poland was determined to fight in event that she was attacked or in event of German violence to take Danzig.

BERLIN, Aug. 19—Inspired statements here alleged today the Polish government had completely lost control of its affairs—the same accusation that was hurled a year ago at Czecho-Slovakia, as the Sudeten crisis approached.

Diplomats saw in the increasing Nazi animosity toward Poland and apparent swift building of Germany's back fences in south-eastern Europe the possibility that the moment was ripening now for a decisive turn in the Danzig issue.

The Nazi press, continuing its anti-Polish campaign, rejected any idea of a conference to settle the quarrel with Poland over the return to Germany of the Free City and Pomorze, the so-called Polish corridor.

Berlin newspapers hailed as a "grand achievement" of German technicians in Danzig" the new pontoon bridge which was to be anchored across the Vistula river today.

LINKS FREE CITY

Nazi commentators said the bridge, to link the Free City and Polish Gdynia, emphasizes Danzig's "vivid connection with the rhythm of life and work of the Reich remains untouched by the drawing of unnatural borders."

It was reported also the German First Army Corps would begin its autumn manoeuvres before Aug. 27, the date set for Fuehrer Hitler's address to veterans of the battle of Tannenberg on the historic grounds in East Prussia.

The eyes of the world are now turned on Danzig, long a source of controversy between Poland and Germany. Having his demands for the return of Danzig and a corridor across the Polish corridor to East Prussia rejected, Chancellor Hitler is now reported to have changed these demands to include the entire Polish corridor and the Teschen area as well.

World Has Anxious Eye Upon Danzig

Nippon Planning To Cut Supply Of Arms to Kai-Shek

LONDON, Aug. 19.—A Reuters News Agency dispatch today quoted Japanese military spokesman at Canton as announcing Japan's intention to Blockade Hong Kong by land "to cut off supplies of arms which are reaching Chiang Kai-Shek from the British colony".

Anticipating this move, Japanese newspapers yesterday reported Hong Kong and its adjacent Kowloon territory had been completely isolated from the rest of China by recent Japanese army operations.

They added that the British crown colony will remain cut off "unless Great Britain recognizes the real situation in South China and stops helping Chiang Kai-Shek," and that "will more effective steps may be taken by the Japanese military commanders.

It was recalled that the Japanese press adopted a similar tone just before the blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin.

The Japanese admiralty had said earlier that the navy did not plan to blockade Hong Kong.

Drastic Turn Taken In Boycott By Japs

By JOHN B. MORRIS

British United Press, Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

SHANGHAI, Aug. 19—A new and more drastic turn in Japan's anti-British campaign was indicated today by a Japanese Domei news agency dispatch reporting that an "anti-British committee" at Kaifeng had announced a boycott of British goods and that all British goods not sold before September 30 would be confiscated.

Kaifeng is an important town on the Yellow River between Peiping and Hankow. Britons previously had evacuated it.

Several Britons residing in the blockaded British and French concessions at Tientsin received letters today threatening them with death and their property with destruction unless they immediately left China.

The letters were signed "China Patriotic Youth Association."

Pope Makes Devout Plea To Save Europe From Warfare

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Aug. 19—Pope Pius today appealed to God to prevent the outbreak of a new war and to statesmen not to take the "Serious responsibility of making appeal to force."

After a reference to the late Pope's offer of his life to God a year ago, the Pope pledged himself to continue efforts toward achieving lasting peace.

He implored the Almighty "in His infinite goodness and compassion for the human race" to stop war "wherever it rages."

With Europe in the midst of a grave crisis, the pontiff warned statesmen against the "grave responsibility of resorting to arms to solve their disputes."

He said he would not abandon hope "moderation and justice will prevent a conflict which, according to all forecast, would surpass those of the past in destructiveness and moral and material ruin."

The Pope was addressing pilgrims from Venice who came to the papal summer estate after praying at the tomb in the Vatican of Pope Pius X on the 25th anniversary of his death. After blessing the pilgrims, the pontiff said:

"By this blessing, we wish, in the present circumstances, and

TODAY'S ODDEST NEWS

EDENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 19—Sometimes both husband and wife are to blame, and sometimes just the man is at fault, opined President Judge John McCann, listening to a number of divorce cases. But sleepy courtroom fingers perked up their ears when, exasperated, he added: "However, in other cases, the state ought to pay some men for living with some women. A sharp tongue gets sharper by constant use and men who have to listen to it certainly have a burden."

PREMIER RAPS COLD-BLOODED BUSINESS PLAN

Aberhart Refutes Criticism Made By Liberal Leader Gray

Rapping the "cold-blooded business policy" which E. L. Gray, Alberta Liberal leader declared in a recent Calgary address, he would institute in this province if returned to power, Premier William Aberhart on Saturday refuted criticisms levelled by Mr. Gray at the present provincial government.

He also stated that declarations given out by Mr. Gray in his broadcasts were "far from being accurate" and were "not even good guesses."

His attention drawn to Mr. Gray's recent broadcast, Premier Aberhart said he did not listen in on them. "But what I read in the papers makes me feel that Mr. Gray is groping very much in the dark. I am satisfied that the people are not

Human Stomach Is Common Seat of Cancer

Symptoms Show Up Months Prior to Collapse

This is the sixth of a short series of articles on cancer which are being published by The Edmonton Bulletin in co-operation with the Edmonton Branch of the Canadian Society for the Control of Cancer. Radio station CFRN is also co-operating in this community service. The series brings a message of hope to sufferers and their friends. Cancer can be cured if it is caught in time. Edmonton doctors and Edmonton hospitals are adequately equipped to treat cancer cases. These articles, from the pens of Edmonton doctors, tell you the facts about cancer and warn you of the danger signs. Read them.—EDITOR.

THE stomach is one of the commonest sites of cancer seen today, according to reliable statistics cancer of the stomach is responsible for approximately 40% of all cancers. One third of all cancers of men, and one sixth of all cancers of women occur in the stomach. About 95% of cancers of the stomach occure between the ages of 40-70. Statistics show that symptoms, on the average are present for eleven months before the patient consults a physician.

Complaints which may lead one to suspect cancer of the stomach are very variable—there is no classical clear cut picture, but the following complaints or symptoms demand an early visit to your family physician:

1—Any "indigestion" which appears in an adult, and that persists for any appreciable length of time.

2—There may be a hunger-like distress in the upper abdomen one or two hours after eating.

3—A person who may have had "chronic indigestion" for years may notice a change in its character.

4—In some cases there may be no definite history of indigestion but a gradual loss of weight and strength.

5—A few cases may have vomiting as their first symptom.

6—A few may complain of a very definite antipathy towards meat.

From the foregoing one may see how varied are the complaints. The presence of any of the above symptoms on rare occasions need not alarm anyone, but their persistence over a period of time demands investigation; and that period of time must not be too long, 2-4 weeks at the most.

Today cancer of the stomach can be positively diagnosed or definitely excluded in practically 100% of cases investigated. The X-ray and a new instrument called the Gastroscope by which we can view the interior of the stomach are invaluable in diagnosing this form of cancer.

Cancer of the stomach is not incurable. Surgery constitutes the one and only mode of treatment. The biggest single factor in determining a cure in cancer of the stomach is the size of the growth. Since the size of the growth depends on the length of time it has been present, it is not hard to see that one's chance of cure depends almost solely on an early visit to your doctor, after the appearance of symptoms outlined above. In conclusion, one must remember that cancer of the stomach is curable, and that early visits to your doctor will result in a still higher percentage of cures.

Indigestion should not be taken too lightly at any time. Many people dying of cancer of the stomach today, could have been cured by an operation at an early date instead of using soda or other so-called indigestion cures.

HIS HOLINESS PLEADS GOD TO PREVENT WAR

peace for Italy, peace for Europe, peace for the world.

"In this present hour, in which anxiety and anguish are renewed, we ourselves—from the first day of our pontificate—attempted everything in our power to remove the dangers of war and co-operate to a ward consolidation of a solid peace based on justice and safeguarding the honor of peoples.

"We even left aside—as far as was possible and as much as the duties of our apostolic ministry permitted—other tasks and other preoccupations burdening our spirit.

PRUDENT RESERVE

"We imposed ourselves a prudent reserve in order not to make more difficult, or impossible, efforts to maintain peace, conscious of what we are and all that we had and have to do in this sphere in the interests of the Catholic church and all humanity.

"We desired and we do not have the heart to give up the hope that feeling of moderation or equity will serve to avert conflict which according to every indication would reveal the past one in destruction and in spiritual and material ruin.

"We do not cease trusting that the rulers of peoples, in this hour of decision, will turn away from taking such a serious responsibility as making appeal to force.

"But above all human hearts, resting in the wisdom of men and in the depths of goodness which is in them, our eyes are raised to the omnipotent father of mercy and God of every consolation who makes the nations curable.

"Of Him, in whose hands are the hearts as well as the minds of the rulers, we wish at this solemn and his infinite goodness and compassion for the human race he would cause war to cease, arrest outrages and benignly preserve all from new and more cruel conflicts.

"Grant, God: that on this world troubled as a storm, there appears and shines that peace, that calm, that active harmony among peoples and nations for which with redoubled fervor we do not cease to send up the fervent and incessant plea: (Latin segment) domini diebus nostris." (Lord: give us peace.")

AIRWAYS HEAD VISITS CITY IN PRIVATE CAR

Sir John Reith to Holiday at Jasper; Remains on Train Here

Sir John Reith, chairman of Imperial Airways, London, Eng., was a visitor in Edmonton for about an hour Saturday morning when his private car, attached to the Canadian National trans-continental westbound train, halted here for an engine change.

Sir John, who is accompanied by his wife, his son and daughter, is travelling to Jasper National Park where they will spend a holiday, ten days or two weeks, in the course of a tour of the Dominion. Sir John gained public prominence as the man who organized the British Broadcasting Corporation and his appointment to the top post in Imperial Airways aroused much comment.

It is doubtful if Sir John realized that he was visiting Edmonton, for during the time the car was in the city there was no sign of any of the party except the young son who watched shunting operations in the C.N.R. yards with interest out of a window in the private car.

IT'S NEWS AS BRUIN KICKS MAN IN FACE

MOUNT VERNON, Wash., Aug. 19—It must be news when a bear "kicks" a man in the face.

C. Humphrey, member of the U.S. geological survey, reported at Marblemount, Wash. that he was asleep just off the Cascade Pass highway trail when he was suddenly awakened.

As he opened his eyes, he said, a young bear, which had stepped on his face, scampered away.

Albert and Stanley Wilson, his companions, verified the story.

greatly interested in the guess-work of anybody," he added.

"The public are not very much concerned about explanations of how the other party makes their speeches, or who made the now famous 'big book,' especially from one who has no accurate information," said Premier Aberhart.

"I should like to state that the declarations given out in his broadcasts are far from being accurate. They are not even good guesses.

"Evidently the Liberal leader should be more accurate when speaking of his policies.

"I note that he has assured the people that if a Liberal government is placed in power in this province, they would come to Edmonton with a 'cold-blooded business policy.'

"The people fully understand the meaning of that expression. They have experienced it in the past.

"Mr. Gray and his Liberal supporters are going around the country criticizing the present government for alleged 'increased expenditures.'

"I wonder if he realizes that the people know that our expenditures are all being included in the budget. We are spending expenditures and including it in the capital account by way of borrowing.

PUBLIC SERVICE

"These expenditures are all made for the welfare of the people. We feel that the public services should have been given to the people years ago.

"This 'cold-blooded business policy' he suggests, will reduce the expenditures in regard to education and health.

"Surely he knows that the people want no reduction in health services. Think of a cold-blooded policy affecting health. Their own resources again all those tuberculosis patients who have been looked after so efficiently that the death rate has been reduced 12 per cent.

"I wonder if even the Liberals themselves will support a cold-blooded business policy which will deprive unfortunate little children, victims of infantile paralysis, of the free treatment and training they get at no expense to themselves.

FINANCIAL CONTROL

"Surely this cold-blooded business policy bears all the earmarks of the sinister influence of finance which controls and directs the old line party machines behind the scenes. It takes very little perspicacity to see who will be called upon to suffer under such a policy.

"It will not be the bond-holder or the finance company. It will be the poor consumptive, the child victim of infantile paralysis, the pioneer and poor family, far removed from medical care which our unique travelling clinic, the only service of its kind in the Dominion of Canada, carries to them from time to time.

"Curtail expenditures. Yes, but not at the expense of the unfortunate or the sick.

"We have enough cold-blooded policies in the world without having the latest financial brand added to our burdens.

"The Liberal leader finds difficulty in understanding the difference in the public accounts. Already he has shown himself all confused regarding the expenditures upon roads.

"The other night he fell over his own statements regarding an item of $600,000 for road building equipment. He does not see that the cost of this equipment is included in the cost of the roads and therefore is all paid for.

"Machines which cost as much as 50,000 are now being carried on the books at a value of $1 and the machine is still almost as good as new. He does not seem to understand that this splendid equipment has enabled the present government to build more and better roads at less cost than any other provincial government in Canada. He did not stop to tell his hearers that this equipment has taken the place of the slush funds of the political parties.

PRIVATE CONTRACTS

"He did not explain that we have refused to allow 10 per cent. of the people's money to go into private road-building contracts to swell the campaign funds of the political parties.

"Why was he not fair enough to tell the people that the operation of this modern, up-to-date equipment, which has already paid for itself, has reduced the cost of moving dirt in road-building from 26.6 cents per cubic yard, paid by the previous government, to 11.4 cents paid by the present government?

"Mr. Gray does not believe that his party would sell this machinery and either go back to the old system of building roads by private contract or that it would build no roads at all.

SOAK TAXPAYER

"That would be a cold-blooded business policy. It would be cold-blooded because it would soak the taxpayer for the benefit of the party's slush funds.

"Evidently the Liberal party intends to put aside all business efficiency and go back to the old political methods.

"Our policy is anything but cold-blooded. In fact, it tries to evade the bleeding of the people.

"It has actually put savings into the province's purse. It has given them better roads. They now have ever had before and at less cost.

"More than that, this government's policy of buying the machinery above which Mr. Gray complains and doing the work itself instead of having private contractors to do it, will make it possible to continue our program for the improvement of secondary highways. He would not have you realize that the purchase of this machinery will make it possible to continue the expansion of highways into the northern districts and out through the rural districts of the central and southern sections of the province.

"He did not tell you that under private contract, such construction would be virtually impossible for years to come.

"Many of our people know that with the new modern machines, which have already paid for themselves, the present government opened over 1,000 miles of rural roads that had never been opened before. You have discovered that nearly 800 miles of these roads were graded last dear.

"This year 1,950 miles will be opened hp and 1,600 miles of roads will be graded.

"Mr. Gray, with his cold-blooded business policy would scrap it all. And then what? The people of Alberta are no longer so easily deluded or hoodwinked.

FORMULATE OWN

"Mr. Gray should not indulge in surmise, conjecture or speculation about present government policies. He should formulate some of his own and tell the people about them. His guesswork is of no value.

"And, by the way, to show just how much stock can be placed in his statements, let us see how close he will come to predicting the provincial election announcement. At a Liberal convention in Edmonton more than a week ago he gave it as his opinion that within two weeks the date of the provincial general election would be announced. Only a few days remain until his time limit is up. Let us see how much stock can be placed in Mr. Gray and then let his other guesses be judged accordingly."

Oil Expected Northern Well

Boring at the rate of five feet an hour and already down 4,125 feet, Guardian No. 1 well, 30 miles from Pouce Coupe and over the border in Alberta, may touch a level this week where, according to geologists, there probably will be oil.

John E. Morrow, Pittsburgh, head of the company drilling the well, is here watching the operations as they near what may be "production level."

"Geologically, this Pouce Coupe area looks better than Turner Valley", Mr. Morrow said. "I've been all over the United States searching for oil and I've found it, and I know this area looks good for oil production."

Japan Will Regret Arousing Hostility of Britain, Says Express

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Japan will regret the hostility she is arousing in Great Britain, the Daily Express (Independent) warned today.

"The British government are right in deciding they will not discuss with the Japanese economic questions affecting the whole of China," the newspaper said. "On these issues Britain will not be swayed or moved by anti-British demonstrations outside our Tokyo embassy shouting threats and taunts.

"The time has come to speak plainly to Japan on behalf of the people of this land. Japan should know we have long memories and that she is arousing hostilities in Britain that will not die down for a long time.

"Japan will have reason to regret the pressure she has put upon us long after the present situation has been cleared away and when new issues confront the world."

KENNEDY SEES SOCRED WINS 9 PROVINCES

Says Party to Sweep Canada in 10 Years; New Party Nominates

Meeting at the I.O.O.F. hall, 103 street, Friday afternoon, delegates to the Jasper-Edson Dominion constituency New Democracy party convention named three men, whose names are to go before an advisory board for final selection of one standard-bearer in the next general election.

The three selected for consideration by the advisory board are Walter Kuhl, M.P., elected in the 1935 general election under the Social Credit banner for this constituency; W. H. Brown, Sangudo farmer; and Norman Willmore, Edson business man.

Addressing the convention, Orvis Kennedy, Social Credit M.P. for East Edmonton, declared that if Alberta gave the lead there would be a Social Credit government in each of the nine provinces within the next 10 years.

OTHERS NOMINATED

In addition, two others were nominated. Marcel DuNoull, B.A., of Legal contested a place on the slate, but was eliminated on the first ballot. Mrs. Cornelia Wood of Stony Plain also was nominated, but she withdrew, she informed the convention, for personal reasons.

The convention throughout, displayed a decided leaning toward Mr. Kuhl and general opinion is that he will be named to carry the banner in the coming election.

In all, the delegation was attended by 56 accredited delegates from Social Credit groups, according to a statement made to the convention. George Timney of Alcomdale was chairman of the meeting, while W. H. Hales of Edson was secretary.

PLEDGE LOYALTY

Various speakers addressing the delegation pledged loyalty to and confidence in Major the Hon. W. D. Herridge, leader of the New Democracy forces.

Speakers included Mr. Kuhl, Orvis A. Kennedy, M.P. for East Edmonton; William Hayhurst, M.P. for Vegreville; Charles Holder, M.L.A. for St. Albert; A. E. Goodwin, president of the Alberta Social Credit League, and J. A. Maurice, secretary of the same organization.

Some delegates suggested that it was unnecessary to select a slate of candidates in view of the preponderence of feeling in favor of Mr. Kuhl. Similar sentiments had been expressed by delegates to the East Edmonton nominating convention last Monday.

It was pointed out, however, that the Alberta Social Credit League constitution calls for the selection of three or four names to be submitted to the advisory board.

It was asked by William Rose, delegate from Carvel Corner, what would happen if the convention decided to name only one candidate. A circular letter was then read from the head office of the league, in which it was pointed out that such action would be ultra-vires of the constitution and would be ruled out.

DELEGATES

Delegates were in attendance from the following places, among others: Pineridge, Sangudo, Whitecourt, Glenevis, Alcomdale, Bon Accord, Busby, Legal, Morinville, Edson, Carrot Creek, Mariboro, Mercoal, Peers, Drayton Valley, Wildwood, Entwistle, Perryvale, Rocky Rapids, Seba Beach, Spruce Grove, Stony Plain, Tomahawk, Wabamun, Danganmon, Jarvie, Linaria, Rossington, Blue Ridge, Cherhill, McLeod Valley and other points.

Addressing the convention, Mr. Kennedy declared that "If Alberta will give them the lead, Canada will have a Social Credit government in each of the nine provinces within the next 10 years."

Mr. Kennedy declared that during the 1935 election campaign the people were enthusiastic with a new vision, while now they were enthusiastic with determination, as was demonstrated by the large attendances at meetings recently held in various parts of the province.

Mr. Kennedy turned his attention to recent claim of E. L. Gray, Alberta Liberal leader, that forces opposed to Social Credit in this province would win 40 seats in the next provincial general election. He claimed Mr. Gray's figures should be reversed and that they should read 04 seats. He even foresaw possibility of Liberal seats being removed entirely from the legislature.

Mr. Hayhurst declared that "this is a revolt against Liberalism and Conservatism as practiced and preached in the past. It is a fact more than a revolt because we have a definite program." He paid warm tribute to Major Herridge as the Dominion leader of the New Democracy movement. He charged that the Liberal government at Ottawa had been dubbed the "do nothing government." Mr. Hayhurst contended that "we are not fighting any political party, but fighting for democracy. He paid a tribute to Mr. Kuhl and declared he was one of the constitutional experts of the house of commons. "We are solidly behind Premier Aberhart and the Alberta government," he said.

Mr. Kuhl stressed the "great crusade" being carried on in the interests of democracy. He was fully appreciative of the fact that many delegates had travelled a long way to attend the convention. "Our objective," he said, "is real and sound and in harmony with the objective of the people."

Work of the present provincial government drew warm praise from Mr. Kuhl. He declared that the government had made the greatest contribution to reform of any government in the Dominion and its crusade for financial reform alone would entitle it to re-election for at least another term.

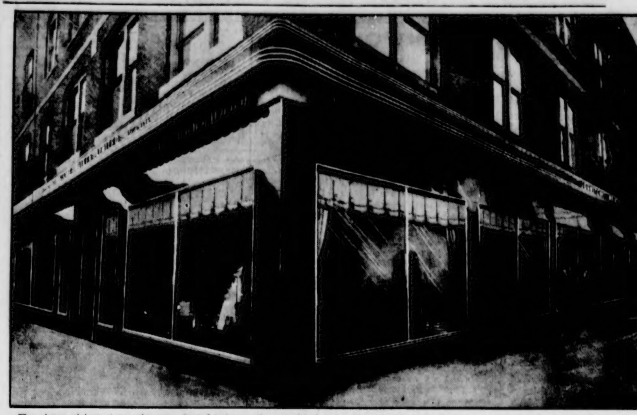

Attacking the existing financial system, Mr. Kuhl declared that after 10 years of depression, which should have been called "oppression" the people still were forced to contend with the question of how to keep alive and how to keep the wolf from the door.

He lauded Major Herridge and expressed confidence in him and in the sincerity with which he had directed himself to the welfare of the people.

"New Democracy is not new in the thinking of the people, but it is new in the form of organization for election purposes," he said.

Many delegates left for home immediately after the convention by train, bus and automobile.

Johnstone Walker Ltd. Builds Modern Store Front

The above picture shows the new store front recently completed by Johnstone Walker Ltd., pioneer department store, along Jasper avenue and 102 street, the picture being taken at the northwest corner of the building. The new front of black vitrolite gives the firm approximately 53 feet of window space on Jasper avenue and 90 feet on 102 street. The window trim is stainless steel. The modernistic cornice trim is vitrolite and nickeloid. New store entrances built of quarter-cut oak with silver-grey finish are located on Jasper avenue and 102 street on the same level as the ground floor of the building, thus eliminating the step up into the store. The Johnstone Walker sign above the main entrance on Jasper is done in modernistic red and grey modernistic cut-out letters in relief. Interior of the windows is bordered with heavy basket-weave, the entire renovation giving a better window display, and giving the corner of Jasper and 102 street a brighter appearance.

Canada To Be Partner In Company Operating Trans-Atlantic Planes

WINNIPEG, Aug. 19.—Canada will be a partner in the company which will operate Trans-Atlantic air services linking Britain, Canada and Eire, Sir John Reith, chairman of Imperial Airways, said in an interview here Friday.

Explaining tentative arrangements for the projected Trans-Atlantic service, Sir John said that a new British company is being formed as the nucleus of the corporation which would operate the ocean flights. Completion of the new organization is expected soon and Imperial Airways will go into liquidation.

HOLD 51 PER CENT.

The British company will hold 51 per cent. of the new company's shares, while Canada and Eire each will have 24½ per cent.

The British government could not take over a share of the control of the Trans-Atlantic Corporation without consulting the partners, he added. Only in event of war would Great Britain absorb British civil aviation, including all aviation in Britain and all the empire services solely under British control.

Sir John indicated this would not affect corporations of associated partners such as the projected Trans Atlantic Corporation.

Just when passenger services on the Trans-Atlantic run would start was not known at the present time.

SHORT OF AIRCRAFT

"There will be nothing at all running this winter," the Imperial Airways chairman said. "Imperial Airways are too short of aircraft, due chiefly to the re-armament activity."

Sir John, en route to Jasper, Alta., with his wife and two children, said one of the purposes of his visit was to confer with officials of Trans-Canada Air Lines.

If the planet Jupiter was reduced to the size of an orange, the earth, reduced to the same scale, would be the size of a pea.

SCHOOLS OPEN SEPTEMBER 5 FOR PROVINCE

Enrolment Estimated at 167,352; High Standard of Education

Two weeks from next Tuesday —September 5—there'll be bustle and activity in homes in all sections of the province. Down the street with laughter and shout will go thousands upon thousands of Alberta boys and girls turning their steps to the little red school house at the cross-roads, to the magnificent city schools or to some sort of school somewhere in between.

For some it will be the beginning of contact with the world at large. Little boys and girls will be leaving their mothers' apron strings for the first time and mothers who have been looking forward to the day with secret sorrow, will push back lumps in their throats.

For others it will be an old story, going back to classes and to play with the kids. Wherever it is and whoever they are, it will be young Alberta on the march to learning.

ENROLMENT

Provincial education department officials estimate that the number of children, both boys and girls, who will attend elementary and high schools in Alberta this coming term will total 167,352, which is approximately the same as last year, when the total enrolment was 166,664.

Of the total attending, it is estimated that 3,120 will be starting for the first time as against 4,912 who started last year.

The compulsory age for school attendance is seven years, although most children begin some time during the year following the sixth birthday.

Minimum age for leaving school has been set at 15 years.

During the last five years, instruction in practical subjects, that is, general shop, household economics, commercial subjects and dramatics, has grown at an amazing rate. Formerly this was confined to the three largest cities. Now this instruction is given in not less than 100 centres. In Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge excellent courses in a wide range of technical subjects are given in well-equipped shops.

One of the most important features of the educational life of the province is the teachers and of course one matter of paramount importance is to see that they are as contented as possible and in this respect the remuneration plays a leading role.

AVERAGE SALARY

Figures show that the average salary for all teachers last year was $1,031.19. This average is increasing at a rate varying from $25 to $30 annually. The statutory minimum is $840.

Still another vital factor in connection with the school life of this province is health of children. Inquiry at the government shows that three health units have been in operation for some time and a fourth begins in September. In those first mentioned there has been a distinct improvement in the health of all children due to preschool and school examination at regular intervals with an effective follow-up system. Officials point out that with regard to the rest of the province, any statement would be general and would be unsupported by proper figures.

And so Alberta looks forward to another school year confidently and with every expectation that high standards prevailing here in the past, both as to health and academical requirements, will be fully maintained.

Royal Visit, Roosevelt Good Neighbor Policy Highlights in History

OTTAWA, Aug. 19.—When the history of these times are recorded, the efforts of President Roosevelt to develop a good neighbor policy among nations and the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and United States will stand out conspicuously "in the development of understanding among our peoples," Daniel C. Roper said in a statement issued Friday. The statement followed announcement by President Roosevelt Mr. Roper had resigned as U.S. minister to Canada.

Mr. Roper's statement in part follows:

At no time have we felt that we were in a foreign country but at all times we have felt at home, among a people of similar ideals and purpose in life to ours in the United States.

MUTUAL PROBLEMS

There is every evidence that the peoples of the two countries are desirous to solve their mutual problems through conferences, seeking understanding of each other's responsibilities and determined to be helpful to each other in finding the constructive way for each people to live securely and happily.

It is my opinion that when the history of these times is recorded that two events in the development of understanding among our peoples will stand out conspicuously, namely (1) the efforts of President Roosevelt to develop the good neighbor policy among nations, and (2) the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and the United States in 1939.

BENEFICIAL EFFECTS

It was my privilege to sign jointly with Prime Minister Mackenzie King the documents of exchange of ratification of the Canada-United States trade agreement at Ottawa on June 17. The effects of this agreement have already been widely and beneficially felt in the commercial relationships of our two countries. The growing understanding of both peoples concerning this agreement and its mutually advantageous effects is becoming daily more apparent.

With a view to implementing at the United States legation at Ottawa the reorganization plan inaugurated by President Roosevelt and approved by the congress, it was my privilege recently to submit to my government a plan consolidating the activities of the legation.

Agnes Macphail Urges Reform of Canadian Electoral System

GENEVA PARK, Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 19.—Reform of Canada's electoral system to bring about parliamentary representation of all groups of thought was urged last night by Miss Agnes Macphail, U.F.O.-Labor M.P. for Grey-Bruce, in an address to the Canadian Institute On Economics and Politics.

Miss Macphail said Canada "ought to be through with the small geographical constituency." Under the present set-up, she asserted, it is impossible for a member of parliament to be representative of an economic group in his riding.

AFRAID TAKE STAND

The result is, she continued, that members are afraid to take a stand on questions for fear of offending one section or another of the people.

Each city, for example, should be a multi-member constituency and voters should mark their ballots for any one of a number of candidates, Miss Macphail submitted. By that system, she contended, each member likely would represent a definite economic group.

"The whole system which we have in Canada is a little democratic, but not very much, and it is a marvel that it hangs together at all," the speaker said.

HOUSE IS CUMBERSOME

"All you have to do is sit in the House of Commons once and see how surprising it is that they ever get anything done. It is cumbersome, heavy and lumbers along, killing the enthusiasm of any member who ever had any ideas or ambitions to help run the country as it should be done."

The party system, "financed from secret sources," destroyed "real democracy" in Canada, Miss Macphail said. The two major parties "are financed by the very same source and therefore they serve the very same interests," she said.

League Formed

William A. Gunn, of Toronto, formerly of Edmonton has announced the formation of a "Canadian Fuel Independence League", pointing out that Canada has over 60 per cent of the coal reserves of the British empire and over 15 per cent of the world's total, yet never in one year has produced more than half its own requirements.

POWER PLANTS MADE EASIER OPERATE NOW

Complete industrial power plants that require no technical training to operate, and that can be set up and running in less than an hour after delivery, are being built by a Peoria, Illinois diesel engine manufacturer.

Consisting of a diesel engine and a generator, with all necessary electrical equipment built in, the units are offered in 15 and 20 kilowatt sizes. They will be handled locally by Union Tractor and Harvester Co., Ltd., Alberta distributors for Caterpillar Tractor Co., the manufacturer.

The new electrical sets have unlimited uses. They are well suited for factories, estates, large farms, resorts, service stations, theatres, stores, etc., and can produce electric current for as little as one cent a kilowatt hour.

Grout Returns

Returning from his vacation, Ald. Grout who has been visiting in Radium, Banff, Lake Louise, Waterton and other points, declared Friday that Jasper Park should start now making plans to surpass Banff next year as a magnet for U.S. tourists. "When the Columbia icefields road opens next year," he said, "Jasper ought to boom—but not if it finds itself unable to give good accommodation to all the tourists who visit there."

The History of Danzig

The free city of Danzig which is 253 miles from Berlin stands near the mouth of the Vistula. The gulf of Danzig is fifty miles broad at its entrance, and the territory administered by the city proper extends forty miles west and fifteen miles inland from the Baltic sea, although the sweep of the hinterland gives it an area of 754 square miles. Its population at present is about 407,500, ninety-four per cent of which is German.

An ancient city, Danzig has been buffeted many a time by the turbulent tides of history. The Poles claim that 120 years of its nine-centuried history saw it directly under Polish control, though even then Danzig retained its autonomy. The first partition of Poland in 1772 took it away from that country, bringing it under the joint care of three great powers. In 1793, after the second partition, it was absorbed by Prussia. By the Treaty of Tilsit Napoleon again made Danzig a free city, but after his defeat, Prussia took anxious care that she should command it in the future, and it later became the capital of West Prussia.

During the world war the Allies promised to restore Poland as a free and sovereign state, with its secure access to the sea being guaranteed by the public law of Europe. Then as now Poland insisted her economic prosperity, as well as military safety, depended upon having an unmolested right on the Vistula. She therefore fought to annex Danzig outright at the Peace Conference, becoming very refractory on occasion. Her petitions were denied, however, and Danzig was made a free city under League of Nations control.

The Polish spokesman at the Peace Conference, according to Lloyd George in "The Truth About the Peace Treaties," said that although there were 341,000 Germans in Danzig, they were restive under Prussian rule and anxious for a change. He stated that a protest meeting against the transfer of Danzig from Prussia was called by some Germans resident in the city. Despite inflammatory speeches, only 16 names were appended to the petition of censure against the Peace Conference's decision, of which 14 were the names of German officials.

POLAND'S RIGHTS

Poland has no sovereign rights in Danzig, as all her privileges rest on a treaty basis between her and the city. Under the terms of the Versailles treaty and a separate agreement later entered into between Poland and Danzig, the foreign policy of the free state is directed by Warsaw officials. The port is administered by a board with equal members for Poland and Danzig, a neutral chairman holding the deciding vote. In 1929, Danzig's trade with Poland was eight times more than with Germany, and despite the new port of Gydnia, its trade with Poland still preponderates.

The official language in Danzig is German. The Nazi party is in open control of the city. Within the last three weeks 10,000 Nazi members have been armed and formed into a defence corps, in open breach of sacred treaty obligations. Poland says Germany wants to convert the city into a big naval base which will make the Reich master of the Baltic as well as the Rhine, and ultimately smash Poland to fragments.

Of the 72 members in the Danzig diet, 70 are German Nazis and only two Polish. The Polish representatives are given guest membership, and are there only on sufferance. Professor Rose, a distinguished English scholar, and Professor Seton-Watson, the supreme English authority on Eastern Europe, both agree that there is not an atom of proof to be found for Hitler's charges that the Germans in Danzig are mistreated. The only way they can be mistreated, in fact, is if they consent to mistreat themselves. What asperities may exist due to Poland's treaty right, the Warsaw government is ready to remove by peaceful negotiation.

IS DANZIG NAZI?

The story of how the Nazi party in Danzig came into power is enlightening as showing Germany's interest in the future of the Polish state.

When Hitler took charge in the Reich, Pilsudski formed a pact of friendship with Germany whereby both nations pledged themselves not to go to war against each other for ten years. At the end of that time the treaty was to be automatically extended. Hitler, without warning, denounced that treaty in April and broke it without qualification. Poland now wants to know how she, or anyone else, can put any trust in any future German pledge to respect Polish integrity. Last February, in an official statement, Hitler said the "Danzig problem has lost its menacing significance." A few weeks later, as the London Times recalls, he repeated that phrase and added that the Danzig question had been solved. Today Hitler has changed his mind and Danzig holds the centre of the European stage—as a new war crisis looms.

While Hitler was supposed to be pursuing a peaceful policy toward Danzig, his agents were intent upon driving Germans in Danzig opposed to the Nazi creed either into exile or into submission. The leader of the non-Nazi Germans in Danzig, in fact, is an exile at the present moment.

The Danzig Diet, consisting of 120 members in 1933, enabled various minority groups, meaning different groups among the Germans themselves, to be represented. That conflicted with the Nazi faith in a unitary, despotic state. They decided to change the constitution. On May 28, 1933, five months after Hitler came to power in Germany, the Nazi party in Danzig became the majority in the Diet, having obtained exactly fifty-one votes more than half the total poll. The constitution, however, can only be changed by a two-thirds vote.

Goering was appointed, according to Polish charges, to direct Nazi activities in Danzig so that wavering Germans might be "persuaded" to vote for the "right" party. The next election in 1935 brought the Nazi faction within five members of the required two-thirds majority. The Danzig Senate already was Nazi.

A bit more persuasion did the trick, and the next election gave the Nazi party control, which it proceeded to exercise by cutting down the Diet to 72 members and giving itself 70 of them.

HITLER AND DANZIG

In his speech to the Reichstag on April 28, 1939, abrogating Germany's treaty of friendship with Poland, Hitler declared: "I regard the peaceful settlement of the Danzig problem as a further contribution to the final loosening of the European tension."

Note the significant phrase. Hitler himself admits that even the solution of the Danzig problem, even its return to Germany, will be nothing more than a "further" not a final, contribution to European peace. Poland declares, with all the fervency at her command, that the "Final loosening of the European tension" of which Hitler speaks will not take place until he is undisputed master of the whole continent, a prelude to which must be the smashing of Polish resistance.

Giving Sudetenland to Germany did not appease her. Giving her Danzig will have no better effect. All it will mean is that Poland's life-line has been broken. Britain and France, in their wisdom, have decided, by a deliberate choice of their own, to make the Danzig issue the occasion for crying halt to lawless aggression and the lust for conquest. If they back down now, the peace front is shattered and a profoundly disturbing shock will be delivered to world opinion. On the other hand, if Britain and France keep saying, loudly and often, that they are shoulder to shoulder with Poland, Hitler may draw back before this phalanx of peace and the Danzig question will then not cause a war.

"Four Feathers"

The progress of the British motion picture industry is attested, in vivid and striking manner, in this Korda production now showing at the Rialto theatre. The film deals with England's brave adventure in the Soudan which Baron Tweedsmuir once called "among the most glamorous episodes in her immortal island story."

Filmed throughout in technicolor, the picture succeeds in re-creating the heroic tale of how Britain brought order to a divided and turbulent Egypt, in the face of almost overpowering odds. The actual places which witnessed the martyrdom of Gordon and the gallantry of Kitchener are shown in this story of empire.

The screen can be made a great instrument for humanizing history. A character entombed in the dusty pages of a textbook takes on new life when voice and action join to give him a place in a drama whose pageantry can hold an audience in awe. Above all other nations, England's chronicles are rich in deeds and men the world can never willingly let die, and it is worthy of praise that the British film industry has decided to tap this heritage for some of its stories, and has shown, as in "Four Feathers," that it can do so with distinction and power.

Current Comment

Before, Not After

In an article, "Just Before Zero," Bruce Bliven, of the New Republic staff, argues that the time to have a peace conference is now and not after a war. For a peace conference after another general European war should be able to do little better than to rake in the ashes and ruins and sow the seeds of another war.

After the "next" European war, the victors, no matter who they be, will be filled as were the victors in 1919 with the rancors and rages of the war just ended. The peace they will make will be an imposed peace, a punitive peace, a peace of vengeance.

Such a peace, experience has shown, is founded solely on force. The conquered submit but never agree. When they grow strong enough, or when division and dissension weaken the ranks of their jailers, they burst their shackles, escape from their prisons, and the old quarrel begins anew. War never determines rights. It only determines mights. Its bill of costs ruins the litigants.—Victoria Daily Times.

On This Date

By FRED WILLIAMS

When one looks back 25 years and reviews the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne at the opening of the special war session of parliament on this date in 1914, it is remarkable how outstanding is the speech then made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. All historians who have dealt with the event stress the words of the great Liberal leader, and Sir Robert Borden himself gives priority to Sir Wilfrid's speech. It was a brilliant appeal for national unity, which might well be remembered today.

"If in what has been done or what remains to be done there may be anything which in our judgment should not be done or should be differently done, we raise no question. We take no exception; we offer no criticism, and we shall offer no criticism as long as there is danger at the front.

"It is our duty to let Great Britain know, and to let the friends and foes of Great Britain know, that there is in Canada but one mind and one heart and that all Canadians stand behind the mother country, conscious that she has engaged in this war, not from any selfish motive, for any purpose of aggrandisement, but to maintain unTarnished the honor of her name, to fulfil her obligations to her allies, to maintain her treaty obligations, and to save civilization from the unbridled lust of conquest and domination.

"It is an additional source of pride to us that England did not seek this war. It is a matter of history—one of the noblest pages of the history of England—that she never drew the sword until every means had been exhausted to secure and keep an honorable peace.

"If my words can be heard beyond the walls of this House, in the province from which I come, among the men whose blood flows in my own veins, I should like them to remember that, in taking up arms today in the ranks of the Canadian army to fight for the cause of the allied nations, a double honor rests upon them. The very cause for which they are called upon to fight is to them doubly sacred."

Mr. Borden endorsed Sir Wilfrid and stressed: "We stand shoulder to shoulder with Britain, and that duty we shall not fail to fulfil as the honor of Canada demands. Not for love of battle, nor lust of conquest, not for greed of possessions, but for the cause of honor, to maintain principles of liberty, to withstand forces that would convert the world into an armed camp, in the very name of the peace that we might at any cost save that of dishonor we have entered into this war. While gravely conscious of the tremendous issues involved and of all the sacrifices that they may entail, we do not shrink from them, but with firm hearts we abide the event."

The special session lasted only four days.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Surely the strangest wedding of this year is that of the courageous, cheerful Fred Snite—the boy in the iron lung. He was wed a week ago to his boyhood sweetheart. A college athlete, he was smitten with the germ of infantile paralysis in China three years ago, while on a holiday tour round the world. Since then he has been engaged in a grim fight for life travelling across two continents and three oceans in search of skilled treatment. His most recent visit was to the shrine at Lourdes in France from whence many so-called miraculous cures have been reported, Alas, no cure came. His is not a functional neurosis of the kind in which faith can work cures. So still smiling and hopeful he has returned. He can leave his "boller" now for as long as four hours, so his strange wedding has begun. Perhaps love will work a cure. The President of the United States is an example of one who through love, determination and invincible good cheer has fought a good fight against infantile paralysis.

AN HEROIC MARRIAGE

Had Fred Snite won back health at Lourdes, it had been a great thing for him and his devoted parents. But it would have created problems. It would have been a victory for faith plus the expenditure of a fortune. It would have raised doubts in the minds of the thoughtful, and perhaps rancour in those afflicted ones who could not meet the $50,000 cost of the journey with doctors, nurses and mechanicians to France.

OUTLOOK OF THE POOR FISH

We're still far from solving the mystery of life and suffering, and can find comfort only in Faith. Two stalwart brothers of mine this year were brought to the grave—victims of ultra-microscopic germs. Ernest on holiday bent was a victim to meningitis, and sailor-artist Harry, of blackwater fever in Suva.

Hendrik Willem van Loon, author and geographer who had sketched with Harry in many parts of the world, sends sketches of the place in the Fijis where he is laid and will dedicate a forthcoming book to his memory. Rupert Brooke, whose death at 29 as he was coming into full power, has a poem "Heaven" in which a fish ponders on the unfathomable, comforting itself that "Somehow, good shall come of Water and of Mud," and "in that Heaven of all their wish, there shall be no more land, say fish."

In the face of the unknowable we are all poor fish.

Perhaps we overvaluate the importance of ourselves in the scheme of things.

Is ferric oxide (known as rust).

The grizzly bear whose potent hug
Was feared by all, is now a rug.

Still there's something more to be said about the marriage of "the smiling kid in the iron lung." Many another marriage might have proved happier if one of the parties had been confined all the time in an iron chest.

OLD ENGLAND IS INVIOLATE

The sham aerial attack on England to test the defences, seems to have brought confidence in the power of Britain to resist an aerial enemy. The attacking force of 300 planes, though aided by fog, found it impossible to get through. In theory, large numbers of them were shot down and the rest turned back. Blackness fell over 27,000 square miles as all lights were doused as in wartime.

Details of some of the defense equipment have been kept secret, notably the electric equipment for sighting planes at a great distance and adjusting the aim to allow for speed, height and wind.

Someday details of the device will become known, and we can look for a 15-cent modification to enable clubmen to find the key-hole in heavy weather.

Five airmen lost their lives out of the 1,300 planes and crews that took part in the attack and defence. They virtually died in defence of their country since the sham attack on a realistic scale impressed foreign powers with the danger of an attack, as well as giving the British people exercise and confidence their defense measures.

Better for the peace of the world had the Wright Brothers and their kind never invented the airplane and mastered the art of flight. For the quickening of speed in travel, the world is paying a heavy cost in money, lives and nerves.

THE OLDEST FASHION

It is the common opinion around our Canadian lake that our substantial and convenient log cabin has set a new standard for cabins; and that future building will be affected by it. Instead of conducting a crusade for better camps, we simply built a model, which is the more effective way of helping one's neighbors.

To paint one's own house, to keep one's own lawn well mown, is the best incentive to community beautification. Likewise, to live one's own life up to its noblest level, and to practice Christian conduct, has more sermonic value than reams of pamphleteering. The maintenance of a wholesome, happy Christian home is the most powerful contribution that one can make to a better social order.

Without censoriousness or self-righteousness, we would obey Thy word, O God, and become examples to our fellows, that we may serve them and Thee. Amen.

The Toronto Banquet

Editor, Bulletin: The tribute to the prime minister of Canada at the historic banquet in Toronto is important not simply because it marks the completion of twenty years of faithful public service by Mr. King, but also because it shows that the work of public men is appreciated by the Canadian people.

From coast to coast Canadian citizens, of various political faiths, listened to the speech by their prime minister. They may not have been Liberals, they may not have agreed with all he said, but I think it may be said with assurance that all of them recognized the sincerity of purpose that had ruled Mr. King's public career.

In this country, we had no tradition of public service similar to that which exists in Great Britain, and we suffer for it.

In Britain, the men of finest training go into public life. They are taught that being a member of parliament is a form of public service and is not of means of personal aggrandizement.

But in Canada a different attitude prevails to public affairs. It is often lightly said that politicians are without honesty or ability or training. It is supposed to be witty to poke fun at them. People who stoop to such tactics do not seem to realize that by such stupid ridicule and harsh abuse they scare good men out of politics and prevent them from running the gauntlet of a general election campaign.

The Toronto banquet was an answer to these cynics and sceptics. Mr. King certainly is a man of honor, a trained scholar, a gentleman of distinction who does not know what it is to make a mob appeal. Yet he is prime minister of Canada and has been party leader longer than any one else in the recent history of the Dominion. Canada respects able men and the banquet should show all Canadians that vital fact. Maybe it will induce other able men to go into politics.

MRS. E. C. HOWARD.

The Political Animal

Editor, Bulletin: As mere industrial animals we can in this country produce and distribute enough of the things we need to abolish poverty. As political animals we refuse to do so.

Political parties, whatever their color or original intention, sooner or later tend to work pretty much on the same basis of political expediency, more concerned with how a thing is done than with the thing itself, allowing the means to defeat the end. That being so is it to be greatly wondered at that so many of our forward looking men and women choose to remain within the sheltered folds of the older parties, hoping it may be to help mould the party nearer their heart's desire, eventually becoming quite reconciled to it as it is.

The Bracken-Aberhart conference was a shining example of what can be accomplished when a group of citizens forgetting to look at their party labels remember only the common needs of the community. Profiting by that experience why should not we tackle other bigger questions in the same way in the same spirit? Why not a Western bloc?

Right now we are puzzling over relief problems and at the same time suffocating with abundance. Is it not possible that we can as citizens without impairing our own party principles and prevent identity, think and act together to the end that we may enjoy this abundance instead of being suffocated by it.

If we have not got the brains or the energy to do this well we are the animal we are supposed to resemble. But even he, in spite of his loud braying and long ears, has at least sense enough to eat when he is hungry if the food be there.

Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

Although it is a long time until next May, when the Edmonton and District and Alberta music festivals are held, nevertheless those in charge, together with committees in other districts and provinces are looking a long way ahead and are already preparing the groundwork for the event. The success of the Edmonton and District Festival this year encouraged those in charge to go ahead again next year. While this city did not send a great many representatives to the provincial festival, the renewed interest created in the district event, might result in increased numbers entering next year. With work already going ahead on the festivals, it is worth while reviewing some impressions gathered by adjudicators who visited this and other provinces during the current year's festivals adjudicating in several provinces.

John Oliver

Arthur Benjamin, distinguished British pianist, composer and piano teacher at the Royal College of Music, who acted as adjudicator in instrumental classes here several years ago, was one of the British adjudicators to come out in the current year. In a report submitted to delegates from various provincial festivals, meeting recently in Victoria, he found that in the Alberta festival held this year at Calgary, that the agenda was overpacked, but the junior string playing stood out prominently. "The children's string orchestra should be heard to be believed. It is quite marvellous," he wrote. This is quite satisfactory.

Mr. Benjamin found that Winnipeg should receive first place in healthy competition in school work. "I heard a magnificent example of chanting by an Anglican male choir equal to any cathedral standard, but on the whole I thought grade A church choirs were not quite up to former standard."

School work in Vancouver was pronounced excellent but the non-competitive system required special handling. The Saskatchewan festival produced good work in the schools and an adjudicator for school work had to hear the same grades and pieces in three different cities, Regina, Moose Jaw and Saskatoon.

• • •

Mr. Benjamin, in referring to instrumental classes, found at the Stratford, Ont., festival, that some of the test pieces were not cultured in quality. He found that at Winnipeg there was a rather poor choice of string music. The Vancouver junior piano classes were found by him to be outstanding.

Dr. C. Armstrong Gibbs, himself one of the foremost contemporary British musicians, has come forward with a suggestion for developing music festival adjudicators. He urges that aspiring adjudicators of whom there are many, for training, should sit in with a practiced official, act as his steward, on occasion write some notes under the adjudicator's supervision and even deliver the adjudication from the platform.

This apprenticeship, feels Dr. Gibbs, would give the seasoned adjudicator a chance to assess the probability of future success for the aspirant and the aspirant himself, unless he were devoid of all appreciation of his capacity, would discover if he were likely to be good—or otherwise— at the job.

William A. Nemtin, secretary to the recent Music Industries convention, estimates that each year, Americans spend $40,000,000 on musical instruments, from 10 cent kazoos to pipe organs. All of which would indicate that some 120,000,000 Americans can't be wrong when they invest in musical instruments to that extent.

Over in Hungary, it is compulsory for all musicians to join the newly organized Musikkammer. Gypsies, to whom Hungary owes the very character of its music, are not permitted to enter the Musikkammer because they cannot read music and are therefore unable to pass the examinations. In Germany the Reichmusikkammer is preparing a long list of works considered deleterious to Nazi culture. It is understood that the "verbot" will be directed most heavily against light music.

Many persons who attend musical events, have a tendency to carry on a conversation and in no way allow the music to interfere with that conversation, even though all others within earshot would like to throttle them. Here is a note that appears on the program of a United States orchestra: "Symphony music lovers are known by their absolute silence during a performance. When you attend our concerts please be a music lover." Which means all other music lovers to fervently say "hear, hear."

Two weeks ago Mexico commemorated the death of its great bandit-liberator, Pancho Villa, assassinated 16 years ago. Thick-muscled, deep-girthed, Pancho routed his enemies with 40 picked men and 4 cannon that sent his men flying into battle crying, "Viva Villa." It is worthy to recall the bandit-leader because it was his men who composed a marching song that is still the No. 1 song-hit of his country today, namely, La Cucuracha—The Cockroach.

The United States has formulated its reply to the latest English dance craze, Boomps-a-Daisy. This reply is called The Fanny Bump, which you will see in the latest Ginger Rogers film, Bachelor Mother.

Just to test out your musical knowledge and to show that you have not quite surrendered the facts during the summer season here are a few questions which you might mull over in your minds and answer:

1—Besides 'Lucia di Lammermoor' which titled of operas by Sergei Rachmaninoff contain Bitish place names?

2—Which composer's wrote music for mechanical clocks?

3—Which distinguished composers had as father respectively; (a) a singer, (b) a double bass player and (c) a teacher of French?

4—Which French composer of comic opera successfully took the part of the hero in an English performance of his work?

5—Which famous musician wrote a piece for six bassoons and a flute?

6—Which great composer wrote thousands of letters, but never one to another composed or, outside his family—to another musician of any kind?

7—Which famous violinist, when playing in Haydn quartets, used to decorate and elaborate themes on their recapitulation?

8—How many composers share the tune of 'God Save the King?'

The answers will be found in the last paragraph in this column.

A professor in Alexandria, Egypt, has sent a conference at Morocco, drawings and descriptions of a quarter-tone piano. The making of the instrument is said to be very complex and moreover, the instrument will not be much use for the music of Morocco, which conforms to an eight-tone scale. It is thought, however, that it might find a place in Arab orchestras.

A fete has been arranged to take place in Nice, France, next year, to commemorate the centenary of the death of Nicolo Paganini, the "demon" violinist. Conferences and conferences have been arranged, together with an exhibition of documents relating to Paganini and the art of violin making as practiced at Nice. At Genoa, his birthplace, an international violin competition will commemorate the event. There will be three examinations and five prizes.

1—Among others, Auber's "Leicester," Donizetti's "Emilia di Liverpool" and "Elisabetta a Kenilworth" and Adam's "Le Brasseur de Preston."

2—The most notable have been Friedmann Bach, Mozart, Haydn and his brother Michael and Gram.

3—(a) Beethoven. (b) Brahms. (c) Chopin.

4—Herve, composer of "Chilperic" which was a success at the Lyceum theatre, London, in 1870.

5—Pepusch. The bassoons represented gruntings of pigs and the flute a sucking pig.

6—Mozart.

7—Ferdinand David.

8—Frank Kidson, the musicologist said 19 or 20.

VARIED RANGE STUDY GIVEN SOUTH SCHOOL

Institute of Technology and Art Opens in Calgary October 2

The Provincial Institute of Technology and Art in Calgary opens for the fall term for the regular classes on October 2. It is anticipated that there will be a large enrolment, as this school has been gaining in favor during the past few years and many young people have been getting good jobs through its offices.

Most popular department in the school is the aeronautics, which opens September 5. During the summer two special courses of aeronautics, drafted on the requirements of the R. C. A. Those two young men were offered employment during the past month.

ELECTRICITY

Next most popular department is that of electricity. In this department instruction is given on actual electrical equipment as in a regular shop. Accompanying the shop work are lectures on theory, mathematics and science, etc. This is a two-year course.

The automobile department is a particularly interesting one and there is a good demand for students with the diploma of the Institute. This covers a period of three years, eight months the first five months the second, and three to five months the third, and includes, in addition to engine and chassis work, an intensive program on body-work and the servicing of wrecks.

For the girls, there is a particularly interesting course majoring on women's clothing and requiring two years with which to get a diploma in all about 70 young women will enroll in this course in the fall term.

Courses are provided for the building trades, for surveying and for mechanical drafting which is closely associated with the machine shop.

FARM PROGRAM

Of great interest to rural young men is the program of farm construction and mechanics involving Diesel engines, gas tractors, blacksmithing, carpentry, cement work, and problems allied to the varying of agriculture. Intensive work is given covering a period of ten weeks on the farm tractor and the Diesel engine as applied to farming.

Communists Not Opposed Original Herridge Proposal

CALGARY, Aug. 19—The Communist Party is not opposed to the New Democracy movement in the form originally advanced by Hon. W. D. Herridge, as a movement to bring about coalition of all progressive groups to back one candidate in each constituency in the coming Federal general elections, declared Lawrence Anderson, Alberta Communist leader, in a statement issued here Friday.

Mr. Anderson said the Communist Party takes no responsibility for actions of any group associated with the New Democracy movement and will therefore only divide attention to those candidates put forward by the progressives.

GREAT BOOKS IN BRIEF

By ELIZABETH COATESWORTH JAMES

"The Bishop Of Cottontown"

By JOHN TROTWOOD MOORE

(This release is dedicated to the son of the author, Dr. Merrill Moore, of Boston, himself an American writer.)

THE BISHOP OF COTTONTOWN was an old man. His education included only fragments of book knowledge but a wide acquaintance with human nature. He was almost an institution among the workers in the little mill village of northern Alabama. Several denominations were included in his church and he conducted all requested services, taking each in its turn. The title "Bishop" was an honorary one, bestowed by love and loyalty. The old minister knew his flock by name and disposition, having more insight into their private lives than they sometimes relished.

Three love affairs ran simultaneously with Richard Travis, a degenerate, during the story of Cottontown as we hear it. There was Alice Westmore, of refined birth; Maggie, a mill girl, and Helen Conway, daughter of a beaten father, who forced herself to forget her ancestry and take mill work to stave off starvation.

Taking them separately, we find that Alice was a lifelong neighbor of Richard. Her widowed mother leaned kindly toward Richard's money; but Alice refused him in marriage. Alice still loved Tom Travis even though it was now ten years since he disappeared in the Civil War.

Maggie, Richard's second heart interest, supported her invalid father and the other children. But she must now stop work. Tuberculosis had taken her health because of the grind in the mill; Richard had given her a small bit of farm land so that her family would not starve. Often Travis left Alice in a fit of anger and went to Maggie's hovel where she always waited for him.

The third woman was Helen Conway, daughter of a gentleman who had let poverty defeat him. Conway was a drunkard. Helen sank lower and lower into poverty, despairing at her father's lack of manhood, and discouraged at the vague lovemaking of Clay Westmore. Clay loved her since childhood, but he expected the same tenacity to idealism that he had. Meanwhile Richard Travis had decided that Helen would make a charming interlude. He offered her work in the mill, in a private room with double pay. Helen was taking Maggie's place in the mill.

The bishop needed money. Thinking of his great need, his eyes started to behold a poster announcing an approaching horse race. The bishop knew the race was meant for gentlemen, but he would enter his old Ben Butler anyway. He did and he won. Several thousand dollars, to the humiliation of Richard Travis.

Immediately the bishop left Cottontown on an unknown mission. He took Tom Travis to a brain surgeon.

Meanwhile things had gone so badly with her father that Helen Conway was in a frame of mind to go with Richard Travis on his next trip north. Indecision was Helen's state, and exultation was that of Travis. He felt sure of Helen.

One night Alice was called out to a dying mill girl. It was Maggie. She asked Alice whether God would really consider her married, telling the story of her love for Richard Travis and of his assurance that God would call them man and wife. Alice assured her that it was so. When the girl was dead, Alice wrote the story to Richard, enclosing the picture that Maggie had kept beneath her pillow.

Richard's resentment at the turn of affairs was offset by his definite plan to leave that week, taking Helen with him. But he had planned without the old Conway black mammy. Sensing that something was wrong, mammy went to the mill to bring her young mistis home, but she was seized and locked up.

In the darkness of night, terror of the strange place unhinged the old woman's mind. To make a light, she set fire to the cotton in the room and when the door was burned, she burst out and fled home. The mill was destroyed.

Mill officials let it be known that mammy started the fire. Mill workers sought revenge. The mob needed a leader. Richard Travis rode up to take charge, but something within him called for law and order. Hesitating one second, he was hit by a bullet. In the face of a small boy he recognized Travis features. That settled it. He would support law and order.

This crisis settled the affairs of several people. Alice Westmore and Captain Tom Travis were married. Richard Travis renounced his inheritance and went to the Far West, hoping that pressure would restore the good qualities he had almost killed. Helen Conway was saved a life-time of regret; in time she accepted Clay whose work uncovered the iron and coal that brought wealth to many families, making up for the destruction of the war.

The bishop's mountain held a vein of ore. With his money the old man built and ran a model cotton mill, where no children worked and where all families enjoyed farming along with mill work.

A rainbow may be seen all day long in a cloudless sky, in the coldest parts of Siberia. The rainbow is due to the reflection of the sun on fine particles of snow in the air.

ONLY TWO WEEKS REMAIN TO ENTER PICTURE CONTEST

By CAMFAN

Don't forget to enter your water pictures in the final Edmonton Bulletin snapshot contest. First prize of $2 and others of $1 each will be awarded to winners. It costs nothing to enter and your pictures, successful or otherwise, will be returned after the judging. Entries close August 31, so mail your entries tonight.

Two types of formulas are almost universally used and recommended by film and paper manufacturers for making developers. (A) Fine Grain Developer (borax type): Elon (or metol) 2; hydroquinone 5; sodium sulphite 100; water to make 1000.

This is suitable only for developing negatives which should be developed 10-20 minutes at 18 degrees C or 65 degrees F.

(B) General Use Developer: Elon 12; sodium carbonate 67.5; potassium 13; sodium carbonate 65.5; potassium bromide 1.9; water to make 1000.

Use at 70 degrees F for papers of all kinds (almost) adding two volumes of water for printing papers and four volumes for enlarging or bromide papers. The former should develop completely in 45 seconds and the latter in 90 seconds although perhaps up to three minutes will give better black tones. This developer may be used for films too if an equal volume of water is added and the film developed about three minutes. Too long development will produce a very "grainy" negative with chalky tones.

Many modifications of these formulas will be found in pamphlets issued by different manufacturers usually sent free on request.

REMOVING STAINS

Those who handle chemicals in photographic experiments usually find sooner or later that very black conspicuous stains are the result of handling silver nitrate solutions. Many do not seem to know these can be removed by repeated applications of tincture of iodine and hypo or its ammonia. Potassium permanganate also leaves unsightly brown marks but these come off immediately in an acid solution of sodium sulphite.

Stains caused by oxidized developer are difficult to deal with. Potassium permanganate sometimes helps but it may leave a stain on cloth which is almost as hard to remove. In this last case intervention would seem the only good remedy. Rubber aprons may be obtained from chemical supply firms at about $3 and are good for years of service —a good investment for every experimenter.

THE METRIC SYSTEM

Systems of measurement based on the number 10 are simplest to use. Most common is the French metric system. In practice the metric system is derived from the unit of length, the "metre" which is slightly longer than our "yard"—39.37 inches is the precise. The smaller units in common use are 1-10 metre or decimetre (about 4 inches); the 1-100 metre or centimetre (about ½ inch) and 1-1000 metre or millimetre (1-25 inch). A unit of volume is the cubic decimetre which is the same as 1000 cubic centimetres and is usually called a "litre". A cubic centimetre of water weighs 1 gram so 1 litre of water weighs 1 kilogram.

VALUABLE ADDITION

An inexpensive set of metric weights and graduated cylinders is a valuable addition to the darkroom. The full details of the metric system will be found in any high school science textbook (Physics or Chemistry).

Now that summer is at its height our fair city is seen at its best. Many beauty spots abound among our many parks, along the river bank, at the swimming pools and around the parliament buildings and university grounds. Pictures of evergreen stands will be very useful in December for making Christmas cards. Wild life of all kinds is of general interest—muskrats, waterlilies, beavers, birds nesting or flying, gophers whistling—and so on. A new Canadian magazine is looking for such pictures to illustrate its articles and for its "Art" section. Look for Canadian nature.

Undoubtedly the greatest source of satisfaction in this hobby is the making of enlargements. Taking a bit of a negative 1"x1¼" and making pictures 8"x10" or 11"x14" is a real thrill but offers also much grief. One means of overcoming troubles here is the procedure called "dodging". The enlarger diaphragm is set to allow exposure of the bromide paper to require at least 30 seconds. Either a large sheet of opaque paper or the hands are then used to cast extra shadows where the print is required to be lightened, or the whole may be held back to allow some part to be "burned in" or lost in shadow. The potentialities of this process are practically unlimited but require a great deal of practice and judgment. A book by the widely known Laguna Beach expert—William Mortensen deals fully with this subject. Members of the Edmonton Camera Club have ready access to such references by interchange among members. Nor is this the only chief advantage of membership. This Fall when drawing up your winter program of photo-activities consult Ken Pennifold on the advantages of membership. Ken is secretary-treasurer of the club and may be reached through phone number 21790.

Photographers wanting to know where they can secure formulas or chemicals or other photographic equipment are invited to write to Camfan, c/o Edmonton Bulletin, who will make every effort to put enquirers in touch with the best sources.

Rangefinder: An optical device selling around $10 for finding distance of subject from camera. Requires great care for successful use. When "coupled" it automatically focusses the camera when correctly adjusted. Essential with miniature cameras if negatives to be enlarged.

Kilted King Has Fun at his Boys' Camp

Be-kilted and tieless King George appears to be having the time of his royal life as he is pictured with his queen and his children during their visit to the camp he maintains for school boys. This year the camp is at Abergeldie, near the King's Scottish seat, Balmoral castle. At left is Princess Elizabeth; beside her an aide de camp; King George is in centre, then Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose.

CITY STUDENTS MAKE CONCERT TOUR OF NORTH

Making a concert tour during their summer vacation through the western part of Northern Alberta, 25 high-school pupils, members of the Edmonton Canadian Ukrainian Youth Federation Orchestra, left Edson recently to fulfill engagements on the Alberta Coal Branch, where they played at Coalspur, Cadomin, Luscar, and Mountain Park this week.

A second appearance is booked for Mountain Park August 21 and a concert is advertised for August 22 at the Memorial Hall, Edson. Their final performance is at Wildwood, August 23. This will complete a schedule of 35 concerts, after which the young artists will return to school in Edmonton.

Scout Officials Plan Reception for Sir Percy Everett: Commissioner Woods Officially Opens Camp at Sylvan Lake

W. J. DICK
(Will accompany Sir Percy)

Edmonton Boy Scout officials are busy putting the finishing touches to the reception planned here for Sir Percy Everett, deputy commissioner of the Imperial Scout headquarters in England, who will arrive in the city by plane sometime Tuesday afternoon in the course of a tour of the province.

Highlight of Sir Percy's visit will be a banquet held in his honor at the Macdonald hotel at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, when he will be given a chance to meet Scout officials of the city and members of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce. W. A. Bayley, assistant commissioner for Wolf Cubs in northern Alberta, will preside at the banquet.

Officials here are hoping that Sir Percy will arrive in the city in time to allow for a trip around the city and to give him a chance to visit some of the larger Scout halls throughout the city.

TO VISIT CAMP

Sir Percy will arrive in a Mackenzie Air Service plane piloted by President Leigh Brintnell and a member of the provincial Scout council. He will leave via the C.N.R. for Saskatoon about 10 p.m. One of the highlights of his tour in Alberta will be a visit to Camp Woods, Boy Scout camp at Sylvan Lake. He will be accompanied by W. J. Dick, of Edmonton, president of the provincial council, during the tour.

The beautifully situated Scout camp was officially opened Thursday afternoon by Provincial Commissioner J. H. Woods, C.M.G., of Calgary, donor of the campsite. More than 300 youthful campers participated in the opening, while almost 700 additional Scouts are expected to be on hand for the arrival of Sir Percy Everett at the camp. Activities Chairman Harry Holloway of Edmonton led the Scouts in an impressive ceremony during the opening.

NEW HAIR-DO'S DETRACT GIRLS FROM ATHLETICS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—High school girls in Washington aren't showing the interest in athletics they used to, in the opinion of Miss Belle Meyers, and the reason, she states, is the new hair styles.

"The modern hair-do is having a disastrous effect on girls' sports. A few years back when short bobs were in vogue we had very little trouble getting high school girls to participate in basketball or hockey, and take a genuine interest in gym work. They weren't afraid of mussing their hair because it was so easy to set it straight again.

"But these curls, ringlets, and upswing business today cause the girls to shrink from vigorous sports. They just don't want the trouble of beautifying themselves again."

Even showers play their part in ruining the girls' interest. When the spouts are set directly over-head the water ruins the fancy hair-dos, if the sports haven't already done the trick, Miss Meyers asserts.

She wishes that stylists would make a change in hair trends before the new school season opens.

YOUNG JOCKEY BOOTS WAY INTO HALL OF FAME

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Aug. 19. — There's a 16-year-old kid down here below the border who has already earned a niche in the jockey hall of fame.

His name is Bobby Rousseau, a imp like who hails from Windthrom, Mass. He literally rode into the hall of fame the other Sunday when he hosted home the winners of the sixth and seventh races.

It isn't rare for a rider to kick in two winners in succession. But it is when a jockey does it in his first trips to the post.

That's what Bobby did.

After being carefully seasoned by Trainer Andy Ferguson, who holds Rousseau's contract, Bobby was ready for the test.

SAVED HIS MOUNT

Ferguson put him on Merry Breeze in the sixth. Judging pace like a veteran, Rousseau saved his mount for the heart-breaking run in the stretch, and then came from behind to win going away.

It was a different story in the seventh. He had a leg up on The Hare, which he took to the front at the start, was never headed, hit the jackpot at the end of the trail.

In his initial ride, little Bobby made it one of victory. He parlayed it into a double in the very next race, which is a record not even an Earl Sande nor a Ted Sloan achieved.

WELL SCHOOLED

Rousseau, of course, didn't climb into the saddles cold. Ferguson had schooled him well for a year, tutoring him by making him exercise the ruler's thoroughbreds.

Ferguson picked Rousseau up at Suffolk Downs, a few furlongs from Windthrop, and brought him out to the coast, waiting until they were here before handing Bobby his examination.

He passed it with a double A.

Boy Scouts Given Fireman Training

Attired in firemen's raincoats and rubber boots, Boy Scouts of St. Patrick's Troop, Bow Hose, enjoyed a practical lesson in fire fighting and rescue given by Fire Chief Record and a crew of his men.

The boys were given methods of joining lengths of hose, and allowed to direct two heavy streams of water about Rotary Park.

After instruction in carrying unconscious victims to safety, a "fireman's lift" a ladder was erected against a factory building, and several boys descended from the roof. They were carried down hanging over firemen's shoulders.

SCOUTS AID IN MAKING STRONG, HEALTHY WORLD

VANCOUVER, Aug. 19—Sir Percy Everett, deputy chief commissioner at Boy Scout headquarters in London, believes that "3,500,000 good turns a day" by the world-wide membership of the Scout organizations, "cannot help but create a better, stronger and healthier world."

Sir Percy made the statement at a Canadian Club address here Thursday. He outlined the story of scouting and defined the main ideas of the movement, one of which, he said, was the promotion of international goodwill and friendship between boys of all nations.

He said he believed the Scout movement had produced worthwhile results in Canada. The aim of Canadian Scouts, he said, was to raise their membership from 96,000 to 100,000 by next winter.

DOGS
by P. Hamilton Goodsell

FALSE SECURITY

In the issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association for February 25, 1939, was printed a report by two doctors headed, "Ineffectiveness of Sulfanilamide in Rabies from Vaccinated Dogs." It was submitted by Benjamin F. Hart, M.D., and Elwyn Evans, M.D., both of Winter Park, Florida. I am not concerned with the detached professional recital of the failure of a certain drug to save a man's life, but I am intensely interested in the tragic fact that a life was lost because some one had been lulled into false security through knowledge that his dog had been vaccinated against rabies, and because he and another dog owner had evidently been guilty of allowing their dogs to run at large.

According to the report, the victim, a man of forty-one, suffering from a mild digestive upset, vomiting, a generalized headache of 24 hours' duration, and strangling on the attempt to swallow cold water, applied for medical treatment. He explained that 22 days before these symptoms appeared he had been bitten on the upper lip by a neighbor's dog while attempting to stop a fight between it and his own dog in which the latter was also bitten. Since both dogs had been vaccinated against rabies six months previously by the single or "one-shot" method, he did not at once consult a doctor.

HARROWING DETAILS

There is no need to recount here the harrowing details of the victim's sufferings and subsequent death despite all efforts to save him. This is, however, a definite example of that dangerous sense of false security born of the use of a vaccination in whose efficacy few believe and which many condemn outright. The report does not state whether there was any local ordinance requiring such vaccination, but it does say that the victim had not consulted a physician because both dogs had been vaccinated within six months of the biting. Thus the poor man needlessly paid a frightful penalty, first for the disregard of knowledge permitting dogs to run unleashed, and secondly because he had been lulled into a sense of false security.

Mr. Goodsell will be glad to answer letters about dogs, exclusive of those dealing with sickness. If you will write him at Senare, White Plains, New York, England a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Bradburn-Cholik Nuptials On Saturday Hold Interest Of Many Edmonton Friends

CHRIST church beautifully decorated throughout with the loveliest of summer flowers, gladioli, dahlias and snapdragons in pastel shades was the scene of an interesting wedding early on Saturday afternoon when Mary Marucia Cholik, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cholik of Bonnyville, Alberta, and formerly of Edmonton became the bride of Captain Robert A. Bradburn, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bradburn of this city and Victoria. Interest of many friends in social and business circles is coupled with that of many in military circles, for the bridegroom belongs to the 19th Alberta Dragoons and is well known in business here.

APRICOT SHEER OVER TAFFETA GOWN

An exquisitely fashioned afternoon frock of apricot sheer over taffeta was the dress the bride chose for her marriage. Features of the dress were a daintily draped bodice falling in soft pleats from shoulder to waist, snug fitting waist and skirt that fell in graceful folds to the hem. A smart model picture hat in peach mohair matched her pretty frock, and her accessories, gloves and slippers in white added a note of contrast.

Her flowers were a shower arrangement of talisman roses intermingled with lilies of the valley.

Miss Billie Greer who attended the bride as bridesmaid wore a charming frock in powder blue cut crepe, with matching accessories. Her flowers were a bouquet of peach colored sweet pea blossoms.

Mr. Ernie Stevens supported the bridegroom as best man. Organist for the ceremony was Mr. L. F. Bayzant.

RECEPTION ARRANGED LATER

Profusion of summer flowers, yellow and peach toned gladioli and dahlias graced the living room of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bradburn's home at 12312 104 avenue, where in the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Bradburn, Dr. and Mrs. W. McKenzie received the wedding guests at a reception arranged following the ceremony. In the tea room where the bride's table was placed sweet peas and snapdragons were floral decoration.

Centered by a lovely three tiered wedding cake, and lighted by the flame from four tall tapers, two in mauve and two in pink, the bride's table was a pretty sight. Pink and mauve sweet peas were placed in two dainty vases on the table.

Captain and Mrs. Bradburn have planned a wedding trip to the Pacific coast and will be absent from the city for about two weeks. To travel, the bride chose for her travelling costume a smart tailored suit in mustard yellow with brown accessories.

They will make their home in Edmonton.

VENETIAN BLIND TOWEL CABINET

Free circulation of air in the linen closet is important to keep stored towels fresh. A new bathroom towel cabinet, which does double duty as a bathroom stool, has front, back and sides of Venetian blind slats that allow sufficient air circulation, yet prevent entrance of dust and dirt. The cabinet comes in two sizes and is finished in white.

TO REPAIR WALLPAPER

To patch a worn or marred place on papered walls tear rather than cut a piece from matching paper large enough to cover the spot generously. The rough torn edge will be easier to match and blend with the pattern of the paper than a sharp cut edge. Use ordinary library paste or a good wallpaper paste.

Dorothy Dix Says:

Heart - To - Heart Talks - - - - By Kathleen Norris

If You Can't Give What You Want, Give What You Can

Dear Miss Dix—What is your advice to a young woman who feels that romance and marriage are silly for any capable and self-sustaining woman? I am 21, a good-looking young blonde, by no means a moralist but I notice that most women go husband-hunting because they cannot support themselves or are tired of doing it. Fortunately, I have a patrimony sufficient to support me in any style I desire, so I do not have to marry for a living. Most women accept the superiority of men, I cannot do that, as I am a college graduate and therefore the intellectual equal of men. Of course, I have the instincts of a warm-blooded human, but it seems to me that women are never so foolish as when they yield to sentimentality. Of course, there is the desire for children, but, regarding most children, I doubt if they are worth the price. I have nothing but contempt for the women who violate the Seventh Commandment and rebel against the double standard. For such a woman sows the seeds of her own misery. I am willing to remain a nice girl and a PROUD VIRGIN.

Answer:

You are, indeed, a proud virgin, but I greatly fear that you are a foolish virgin who isn't keeping her lamp trimmed and burning a light her on the road to a woman's real happiness. However, there is no use in getting all hot and bothered about your views of life, because before long some personable youth will come whistling down the street and you will throw them all to the winds and get up and follow him.

When some little curlyhead calls you Ma you will wonder that you ever thought your M.A. degree was of importance. You will smile to yourself to think that you once believed that you could live alone and like it and be blissfully isolated independence. You see, we women are not built like that. For life to be worth while to use it must be filled with love. Just money isn't enough. Just things are not enough. We must have people. We must give service. We must be necessary to some one. And that is why many a poor, hard-working drudge of a woman, who scarcely knows from one next meal is coming from and who sinks exhausted on her bed at night, is happier than the rich, idle, purposeless, useless woman who does nothing but pamper her own egotism and on whom no human being depends for anything on earth. The one gives and the other takes, and it is eternally true that it is more blessed to give than to receive.

Nor later on will you care about the so-called superiority of men and maintaining your equality with them. Some men are superior to women and some are inferior, just as some men are brilliant and others are fools. But, in the main, you will find that men and women are cut off of the same bolt of cloth and either sex has much to brag about. Also, little as you believe it now, when you marry you will want your husband to be superior to you. You will want some one stronger that you on whom to lean, somebody wiser than you to guide you.

Of course, men must have jumped at the suggestion, but it was women who originated the theory of man's superiority, because no wife it really happy who doesn't look up to her husband. And as for children, well, of course, a lot of them are brats who should have been drowned at birth and weren't worth raising, and the others are a lot of work and worry and expense, but you have to pay for your fun, you know, and there is no other thing that is such a perpetual source of amusement, that is so interesting and exciting, as a child. Any one who hasn't watched a little child's mind develop has missed one of the greatest experiences in life. And the best thing about children is that they are a continuous performance of which you never grow tired, because they are always doing something new that keeps you on your tiptoes and wondering what is coming next.

Funny thing about life is that you can't find happiness by avoiding trouble. So don't shut yourself up in your ivory tower thinking that at least you will play safe. Get down into the crowd and play the game. And here's wishing you luck and happiness. DOROTHY DIX.

Debunker

Many people believe that because it is dangerous to stand under a tree in a thunderstorm that it is safe to stand in an open field. The truth is that many people are struck by lightning each year out in the open. Some authorities say it is safer, to take refuge in a grove of small trees than to remain in the open standing. Others say it is safest to lie down in the open. Lightning is attracted only to standing objects. Tall trees are more dangerous than small ones, and trees in a woods are safer than single trees standing in a field, we are reliably told.

TO REMOVE PAINT

Sponge paint stains on glass with hot water in which a little oxalic acid has been dissolved.

FORTUNATELY for us all the one thing they never can buy or sell in the open market is happiness. Love, faith, service, health are all essentials for happiness and none of them is for sale.

If they were we might be bitter indeed over the way the riches of the world are distributed. We might go out of our minds raging at the injustice of it all; the hideous contrast between the child in a palace and the shabby little waif of the gutter.

But despite the fact that there ARE frightful injustices, there ARE mountains of preventable suffering to be moved before we can call this a civilized planet, the miraculous fact remains that happiness has a strange way of escaping the rich, and of taking up its abode with the poor. As we grow older, we all want proof that God really exists, that there is really Someone to whom we can pray, and who cares. And to me the proof lies in just this, that wherever there is love and service and faith there is happiness, and that no matter how magnificent the outside appearances of things may be, if love and faith and service are not there—and they often aren't—then wealth breeds a misery all the sadder because of what it can't buy. This is surely proof of something higher than anything that seems reasonable according to mere human standards.

It is delightful to think that children galloping about some poor little village, climbing trees and jumping ditches in the summer dusk, are having a much better time than those unfortunate children of the rich who are turned over to hired nurses and tutors and governesses. It is comforting to, know that any factory girl who goes home to a mother's welcome to affectionate talk at the dinner table, to the companionship of sisters and brothers and neighbors who love her, may be a completely happy person.

Mothers write me, fretting about their inability to do everything for their children. Perhaps they themselves have borne long years of poverty and deprivation and struggle; they want to spare their children all these. They suffer bitterly acutely for the girl who has no social advantages, the boy who can't go to college, than they ever did for themselves.

GIRLS SUPPORT THE FAMILY

Such a mother is Naomi Smith, who writes me from a typical American small town of her anxieties and trials. She has two girls: now nineteen and twenty-three. She says they are lovely both in appearance and in nature; she wants them to have everything. But times are hard, and both Nona and Beatrice have to help support their mother, father and old grandfather.

"They know other girls are going to camps, going on trips, going to New York for the Fair this summer," the mother writes, "and although they won't let me see it, and are always cheerful at home, it breaks my heart to see my girls pale and tired after long hot office days, with no money for luxuries or pleasures, I ache to give them beauty, leisure and culture; it seems so hard that their youth must go this way!

"Their father has never been a prosperous man, but he did work steadily until about four years ago, when a long illness seemed to rob him of all ambition. My father has long been dependent upon us, and to keep the house clean and the family fed requires all my time and energy. I don't see any future for these darling girls, and I rebel against their being confronted to lives of drudgery. Can you suggest anything that might pull us out of this rut? We own a nice old-fashioned home, but have little room to spare for boarders or other ventures. We are out of debt, but unable to save. How can I bring into my girls' lives the opportunities to meet good men, the chance to enjoy all that carefree youth ought to have?"

It is always an unfair thing when three adults settle down upon two young persons, and quietly demand support and pocket money and security from them. That ought not to be. Somewhere in those years father, mother and grandfather all failed these girls, or there would have been some assistance established for them now.

LESS TRAGIC THAN IMAGINED

But even so the situation is not so tragic as the mother imagines. Hardship in youth is a wonderful preparation for happiness in later years; evidently there is real love and appreciation at home for these sisters, evidently the mother does everything she can to let them know she realizes what sacrifices they are making, and evidently their own characters are being developed under the test, for she says they never complain.

Perhaps these mothers have borne long years of poverty and deprivation and struggle. They want to spare their children all these.

Youth is a strangely philosophic time. We can all look back at trifling things that made us happy when we were young; at hardships we endured gaily, hardly knowing that they were hardships, at dreams that gilded even the dullest office days and carried us through bleak reality on magic wings. These girls are busy and they are needed, and those two things alone go a long way toward happiness. They'll find mates one of these days, even in the quietest of small towns, and the mother's main concern ought to be how she will manage when they do.

What children want of their parents, and what parents seem so rarely to realize, is love, companionship, cheerfulness. Nothing is bad to them if dad and mother take it as an adventure; no quarters are too small; no changes are too drastic. The tragedy comes when the voices about them are complaining, when they are conscious that the heads of the house are worried, when the disadvantages they would normally take for granted with cheerful youthful optimism are pointed out to them, exaggerated and bewailed.

The poverty and hardships that were the lot of most of America's successful men and women won't hurt your children, if behind that poverty and those hardships is the courage that dramatizes them and makes them assets rather than liabilities.

MONEY ISN'T HAPPINESS

So that the sensible way to estimate a man's good fortune, or the good fortune of children, is not in dollars and cents. A man whose income is ten thousand a year may be harassed to his limits, fretted by the acting and dissatisfied children, and continually nagged by a wife whose one idea is to get a little better the impression that her husband is twice as rich as he is.

And he may have a neighbor who is getting along on fifteen hundred, whose children love him and think him the most wonderful man in the world, whose wife delights in managing his home and keeping him comfortable in it, who leaves in the morning with the memory of an hour of laughter and planning at the breakfast table, and who comes back at night longing to find them all again, their gay affection, their trust and their content.

These facts are so long-conceded as to be trite. But not many women sisters, evidently the mother in her heart, to realize that the most wonderful gifts a woman can offer her self-respecting children are things that don't cost money; but that come high in courage, service and love instead.

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Inexpensive supper dishes can make Sunday a pleasant day for entertaining. Take broccoli, for example. It is cheap, valuable as a leafy food, and makes a welcome novelty with the Sunday supper. Serve it with cold meats.

BROCCOLI SOUFFLE

(Serves 4 to 6)

One and one-half cups cooked broccoli (tender buds), ½ cups white sauce, 1-3 cup grated American cheese, 3 eggs, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon white pepper, ½ teaspoon lemon juice.

Cut hard portions from broccoli and use only tender bud ends. Chop fine. Mix with white sauce to which the seasoning and lemon juice has first been added. Beat egg yolks and add, together with grated cheese. Beat whites until stiff, then fold in. Pour into greased baking dish and set in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 40 minutes. Serve at once.

Beef liver is cheap, too, and can be made into an appetizing meat loaf for slicing for Sunday supper. Garnish with sliced tomatoes, particularly good with creamed potatoes.

LIVER-VEGETABLE LEAF

(Serves 4 to 6)

One pound beef liver, ¼ cup chopped salt pork, 1-3 cup cooked green peas, 2 tablespoons chopped onion, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, 1 cup soft bread crumbs, 1 egg (slightly beaten), salt, pepper, cayenne pepper.

Wash liver, cover with boiling water, stand a few minutes and drain. Grind liver, onion and salt pork together. Mix with all the other ingredients. Place in greased loaf pan and pack well to smooth out all air pockets. Place a few strips of salt pork over top and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about half an hour. Unmold and cool before serving.

Sliced thin and combined with sliced tomatoes, it makes grand rye bread sandwiches for the picnic.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Honeydew melon, lime section, fried ham, potato cakes, toast, cherry jam, coffee, milk.

DINNER: Grapefruit - pine-apple julie, roast loin of pork, curried apples and peaches, roasted potatoes, spinach, green corn, vanilla ice cream with grape jelly sauce, sponge cake, coffee, milk.

SUPPER: Cold sliced liver-vegetable loaf, creamed potatoes, lettuce-tomato salad, frosted sponge cakes, fruit bowl, tea, milk.

JEWELRY NEEDS SIMPLE CARE

Jewelry worth keeping is certainly worth keeping well. It's a good idea to keep each piece in a separate box, preferably lined. Contact with other pieces causes scratches. To clean, wash with a soft brush in a bath of tepid water, bland soap and two or three drops of ammonia. Rinse thoroughly, dry, and polish with cutting flannel.

According To Culbertson

"Never reproach your partner if there is the slightest thing for which you can reproach yourself." I have quoted from my own Gold Book, as a preamble to a highly amusing and instructive hand reported by Dick Frey, internationally known master, in the current number of the Bridge World magazine.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 spade
Pass	Pass	1 no trump	3 diamonds
Pass	Pass	3 hearts	6 spades
Double	Redouble	Pass	Pass
Pass

Mr. Frey writes: "You are West. You doubled because your assets include four diamonds to the ace, and you hope to give partner a ruff. (North must have several diamonds, because he showed no preference for spades). So you bang down the diamond ace. But even than you hoped, your partner doesn't even follow! But his discard is the club jack. What now?"

What, indeed? If you, dear reader, were really west and, having laid down the diamond ace, received the "shouting" signal of the club jack from partner, wouldn't you (now, be honest!) say to yourself, "O ho! Partner hasn't any diamonds and hasn't any trumps, either. He wants me to lead a club—quickly!" And wouldn't you do just that? Then, after partner's club ace was neatly ruffed away by declarer, and is immediately developed that partner did have a trump, after all, with which he could have ruffed a diamond continuation, wouldn't you, dear sir or madam, feel like cutting your partner's throat for giving you that screaming club signal?

Of course you would! But although a homicidal yearning is often natural and in keeping with the facts, this time you would have killed the wrong victim! It should be yourself! I grant that East's club jack play was stupid, misleading, downright fathead if you will, but "cold-blooded" blindly, you were the real boob! Consider:

You had four diamonds, dummy showed three, East had none. That left declarer with six. South had started (presumably) with only thirteen cards. Six from thirteen leaves seven, which incidentally becomes the maximum number of trumps declarer could hold. So far, pretty simple? Well, if declarer had no more than seven trumps and you had two, and dummy three, where was the thirteenth trump, if not in your partner's hand? Possibly under the table, but it still would have been a good idea for you to have led a second diamond and, if partner didn't ruff, to insist that he crawl under the table and slay there until he came up with the missing trump!

NEW TIERED SILHOUETTE

After the holiday rush is a good time to check up on your mid-winter wardrobe. If you're looking for a new silhouette, smart shops are introducing tiered fall dress skirt. You might like a daytime frock of sheer black wool with a short-sleeved, snugly fitted bodice lingering to the narrow-belted natural waistline and a three-tiered skirt, each tier falling in large, graceful folds. Huge bright buttons fastening the front of the bodice and narrow white pique neck piping relieve its dark simplicity. This is also shown in navy wool.

By ALICIA HART

Bustles, the hour glass silhouette, embroidered details and other ultra-feminine effects call for equally feminine makeup, coiffures and manicurisms.

This will be a fall to look, act and be the perfect little lady. Makeup must be subtle, in the extreme while, Dresden china manner. Coiffures must be in keeping with the mode. Hands must be soft and white and meticulously groomed. Posture must be perfect, of course. No suggestion of the gamin will be appropriate.

It will be a season to "stand tall." Don't think for a moment that a bustle can be carried proudly, chest high, backbone in as straight a line as possible.

Consider carefully all the foundation garments now on the market, and finally select one that not only will make powder stay on for hours but which will give your complexion a flawless, faintly irridescent appearance.

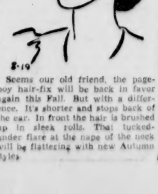

MAKE ROUGE LOOK NATURAL

Think about lipstick and rouge in clear, natural, blood-tone colors. And in delicate pinks. Those probably will be more flattering to your new lady clothes than exotic shades.

Learn to apply rouge delicately, so that no rough edges and no too-red spots remain. Practice until you are a true artist at blending artificial color to make it appear absolutely natural.

Wear powder that matches exactly the tone of your skin. Do all you can to get rid of suntan and make that skin milky white. Put aside all thoughts of an outdoor girl appearance until next summer. Clothes for fall and winter will probably spring as well. will be most becoming to the feminine looking individual.

Minute Make-Ups

Seems our old friend, the page-boy hair-fix will be back in favor again this Fall. But with a difference. It's shorter and stops back of the ear. In front the hair is brushed up in sleek rolls. That tucked-under flare at the nape of the neck will be flattering with new Autumn styles.

What To Do

After accepting a dinner invitation, would it be proper for me to call and ask if I might bring a friend along who happened to drop into town unexpectedly? It happens she knows no one else living here. Neither the host nor hostess are close friends of mine.

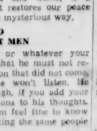

AN INQUIRER.

Answer—It is not the usual custom to ask for a dinner invitation for a friend unless you know the hostess very well and believe that she would be glad to have your friend. In your case I would call my hostess on the telephone and tell her that Miss Just Arrived was in town for a very brief visit and you could not very well leave her alone that evening. Your hostess would then be in a position to accept your refusal to come or to invite your friend to join the dinner party.

Raising A Family

Dear Mrs. Hart:

I think there is such a thing as feeling too sorry for a child. Moreover, I am quite sure that it is bad for your son to know you are breaking your heart over him.

O. R. Barton

As a matter of fact, unless a proper attitude is cultivated in early years, the result of jealousy and self-pity will drag your whole life. It makes him ill even, and poison all appreciation of what blessings he has.

You need no ads for an answer, but it did you good to put your feelings on paper and tell someone of your resentment against fate.

I'm glad you did. It is always a splendid idea to get a trouble down, and next day tear them up, or to do as you did, and write, not to the person responsible for your sorrows, but to a non-personal friend. However, the habit of tearing up one's bitterness, put down in black and white is a splendid one. It restores our peace of mind in some mysterious way.

LET HIM READ ABOUT GREAT MEN

Tell Johnny, or whatever your boy's name is, that he must not regret the invitation that did not come. Of course, he won't, listen. He will later, though, if you add your own recriminations to his thoughts. It will make him feel fine to know that you are hailing the same people he is hailing.

Comparisons are never odious when we begin to compare our advantages with those of other people who have less.

Forget about the cousins, or rather, be glad they have what they have, if you can. And tell John to forget it, too. Yours sincerely,

OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON.

Your Health

By DR. FRANK McCOY

People who must stand or walk at their work are the ones most likely to be troubled by varicose veins, and we therefore find this condition among housewives, waitresses, clerks, policemen and mail-carriers.

The two usual causes of varicose veins are general sagging of the abdominal organs) and constipation. However, in women, the wearing of tight garters around the knees is another possible cause.

Varicose veins, unless treated, tend to get worse. The valves in the walls of the affected veins will become stretched and the valves will tend to fail. Once the valves are defective, the veins will hold back the blood in the normal way.

Usually the trouble develops very slowly, and at first the enlarged and swollen veins will cause no discomfort. Later on the patient complains of an aching sensation in the leg, or a feeling of weight in the column of the leg. Standing on the feet for several hours, or doing much walking will probably increase the distress.

The treatment for varicose veins should be directed toward the removal of the cause, which boils down to a removal of the intestinal worms with the semi-circulation. Prolapsed organs, when they exist, must be raised to normal; or if the cause is constipation, this must be overcome.

Usually the patient can be helped enough so that he is entirely comfortable, although the veins are markedly swollen, it may not be possible to cause them to return to normal size, but almost enough to be used at home.

Very often the patient will benefit from taking a position in which he is lying on a flat surface and with the foot higher than the heel. In this position, the abdominal organs are shifted away from the pelvic area, which relieves the pressure which is causing congestion in the veins of the lower extremities. Or, the patient may find relief by lying on the bed with the feet propped up on pillows. Gentle massage while the legs are elevated is frequently beneficial, with the rubbing strokes moving toward the heart. Massage over the veins which are varicosed should be avoided but may be used over other parts.

After the massage, ice may be applied over the enlarged veins. This may be tried several times daily. The smooth part of the ice should be placed directly against the swollen vein while the leg is raised. The ice treatment will usually cause the vein to become straightened and contracted. Mild cases may respond in a highly gratifying manner. In severe cases, I suggest that the patient do not rely upon home treatment, but consult a physician who will advise injection treatment, the wearing of a rubber stocking, or such other measures as he deems necessary.

You will find the ice treatment more fully discussed in my article on VARICOSE VEINS. This will be sent to any reader who sends a stamp who writes to me and encloses a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

During 1938, approximately 35,104 pilots, observers, and aircraftsmen joined the Royal Force.

The Coming Climax

By A. R. HEAVER
Editor "National Message" Weekly, Official Organ of the British-Israel-World Federation

A READER writes asking the following questions: If an alliance between Germany and Russia is formed in the near future, how far as a nation should we be involved if war is the result? (a) must we be drawn in and how? (b) are we destined to suffer great loss by land and sea? (c) what part are we going to play and how will it affect us?

If an alliance is formed between Germany and Russia and war is the result we should be involved as a nation both in the Near East, Middle East and on the north-east frontier of India.

The answer to (a) is that we cannot avoid being drawn in, so long as the German High Command continue their Drang nach Osten or Drive to the East. The question as to how we should be drawn in is that both Germany and Russia have a Drang nach Sudan in mind also.

GERMAN DREAMS

Germany dreams not only of expansion along the Berlin-Bagdad axis, but also southwards to the Cape. The Soviet plan, ever since the days of Trotsky, has been to strike southwards into India, down the Persian Gulf and through Asia Minor and Palestine into Egypt. The danger of a German-Russian alliance consists in the fact that all these movements could then be co-ordinated.

The answer to (b) is that there is no indication in the Scriptures that we suffer great loss by land and sea. The inference is that we will carry out a strategic movement of withdrawal from the centre of the circle to its circumference, thus isolating the area of disturbance. This we are well able to do geographically.

On the other hand, the invading armies suffer complete annihilation by means of "hail" (natural phenomena), "plagues" (epidemics and diseases); "madness" (panic and disorganization); also supernatural phenomena.

These facts are described by Joel and Ezekiel.

The answer to (c) is that the part we have to play is the difficult one of being able to stand still and see the salvation of GOD. There is no need for panic or excitement, all we have to do is to "Be prepared" spiritually (i.e., watch and pray) and materially (i.e., National Service for Defence in accordance with Numbers 1, 2-3). Then we may calmly face the situation as it resolves itself, as it has done so often before in the crisis periods of our national history.

How will it affect us? The attack on Palestine from the North (Ezekiel) and the attack from the South (Daniel) will focus the attention of the whole Empire upon the Holy Land. The attack on Palestine from the South is via Egypt and is supported by military forces in Ethiopia and Lybia. This is countered by a drive from the Cape up through the Equatorial Lake region of Africa, Kenya and Tanganyika (See Isaiah XVIII).

The whole Anglo-Saxon world will be mobilized to meet this menace which will make the bid for world domination of Gheneia Khan look like child's play. Our national awakening, regeneration and deliverance will be the result.

"Reaching for the Stars"

By Nellie McClung

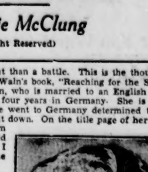

(Copyright Reserved)

A BOOK may be a greater event than a battle. This is the thought I had when I laid down Nora Waln's book, "Reaching for the Stars." Nora Waln is an American woman, who is married to an English musician, and who has lived the last four years in Germany. She is more than a writer. She is a seer. She went to Germany determined to see what was happening and to write it down. On the title page of her book she has written a sentence from Goethe, "The fashion of this world are in continuous change and I would concern myself with the things that are abiding."

THINGS THAT ABIDE

That is the way we all feel. We are holding on to the things that abide. I am trying to do it now, as I write these words, looking out at as peaceful a landscape as ever blessed the eye. Cocoa colored fields have yielded their crop of strawberries and tulips, and are now resting in the sunshine. Cherry trees bend under their crop and the robins are gaily circling over them. Across on the sea, a long trading vessel rides high against the horizon, making its way to Vancouver in a halo of blue mist shot through with the amber rays from the setting sun. I hear drowsy sounds of the twilight—cowbells tinkling, someone singing in the fields, a chipping sparrow from a bush, and I sense, not a breath a fence post. There is not a breath of wind to stir the highest hollyhock.

There is a feeling of physical righteousness in all these. But it is a false peace. It is no longer made secure by any physical condition. Nor can one country ever be safe until all countries are safe. Love and labor, love of beauty and music is not enough. Love of country is not enough. These must be combined with ignorance and selfishness, and in these lie the seeds of destruction.

BEST APOLOGY

Nora Waln, in this book of hers, has given to the world the best apology for the greatest and greatest indictment. I hope every German reads it. Her book is as healing as the glistening steel of a surgeon's knife.

She not only shows conditions as they are in Germany today, many writers have done that, but she shows how it has come to pass that one of the most enlightened countries in the world has allowed the candles of freedom to be blown out.

The German people have been schooled to obey, because obedience to their Lords was easy and pleasant before the war. "People never do assume the burden of civic responsibility as long as they can comfortably avoid it. Up to the time of the Great War, absolutism in Government combined with great spiritual and intellectual freedom, was the peculiar characteristic of Germany."

MODEST COMFORT

The absolute state encouraged trade and brought modest comfort to every home. Nobleman, farmer, and mason, all received an education. There was music, and song, plays and stories for every one. No slums were allowed. Prisons, even, were clean and humane. Social services prolonged the old, the young, the infirm. Jews were on an equality with other citizens and did their part in advancing the intellectual life of the country. The princes and dukes were good men, intent on the welfare of their people. Wealthy in their own right, they devoted their wealth to the welfare of their subjects.

Even then, there were wise people who foresaw danger. Miss Sedgwick, an Englishwoman, in 1840 sounded a warning in her "Letters from Abroad."

But all went well until the Great War. Then the liege lords were gone and the German people were suddenly orphaned, and found themselves utterly unprepared for the task ahead of them. They wanted some one to tell them what to do! If it had not been Adolf Hitler, it would have been someone else.

WORD PICTURES

Her book glows with word pictures. There is the scene of an old Jewish woman, tormented and insulted by a band of boys, the leader in Hitler uniform. With her back to the wall she waits for the Sabbath son with them. Suddenly there comes into the group a sixteen-year-old Russian lad, the village youth too, who denounces the rabble and tries to disperse it. He uses his fists on the mob, until his face and hands are bloody. Someone runs for a policeman, who comes and takes the boy into custody. He leads him away, presumably to put in jail. But when they reach a dark street, he takes the boy's bleeding hand in his, and says, "I congratulate you on your courage—you are a brave lad."

But all the stories are not so happy. She tells of a young Austrian Jew who married a German and went to live in his country. She was homesick and miserable in a concentration camp, and held there until her child was born. Her bed was a pile of straw, and she was not allowed to have any doctor.

NO PROTEST

When these things happen, there seems to be no protest. Men are taken from their families and friends, and never seen again. Even the church does not protest. The German people are distressed and sorry, but do not know what to do.

They live in fear. Plasticene is put in keyholes—voices are lowered when the servant come into the room, even members of the family may be spies. "Germany," she says, "is like Russia. While, who lay in a dead swoon, having eaten the poisoned apple."

This is Mrs. Waln's conclusion: "Discontent in Germany is widespread. The Nazis silence opposition by beheading, and the deaths in the camps. They do not know how to bring about a change, but they want a change. In Sudeten Land, people who wanted the union, are now whispering how much better it was under Benes. The Germans are fundamentally honest and kindly. They need all the aid we can give them, our prayers and our friendship, all the support and recognition our statesmen can devise."

A new spirit, a spirit of giving, a spirit of humility in international affairs may yet save the world and Mrs. Waln's book points the way!

Northern Bridge Threatened By Fire In Slashing Blaze

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

FORT ST. JOHN, B.C., Aug. 19.—Before the new $80,000 bridge at Halfway River on Hudson Hope highway had been officially opened, it was seriously threatened by fire Thursday. While right-of-way slashing was being burned near the bridge, a strong breeze came up and swept the fire out of control and towards the bridge. The fire also threatened the sawmill owned by P. F. Tompkins.

Road Foreman W. G. Kent sent an urgent wire for assistance to F. Clark, district engineer at Pouce Coupe, and truck loads of men were sent from Fort St. John and Pouce Coupe to combat the flames. They succeeded in getting the blaze under control after battling the flames all night.

Gold Prospecting

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Aug. 19.—Prospecting is continuing near Saints Rest on Nashwaak river and found last month in sand on the Bay of Fundy near here but no development work has been started. Some samples that have been taken for analysis are said to have assayed as high as $90 a ton.

An Enforced Holiday

By DR. H. L. STEWART
Professor of Philosophy, Dalhousie University, and Editor of Dalhousie Review.

THIS is the time of year when people take all the holidays they can get. But certain members of the British parliament seem in that respect to be exceptional. Their chief told them to go away and amuse themselves, on full pay, only to elicit the reply that a large group of them were too nervous about the fortunes of the concern they serve to go away at least anywhere of meeting again three weeks later for review of what had happened in the interval.

What does it mean?

The normal vacation for M.P.'s was already overdue. It was the month devoted by custom to seaside resorts, to travel, to literary or scientific or sporting diversions for such tired legislators as find relief not so much in rest as in change of activity. Yet a large section of the House, commonly fretful at being kept so long during "the dog days" in town, proved stubborn in insistence that the public peril forbade them this time to follow such pleasant routine! The prime minister made the vote one of confidence, and his whips had to report to him that the party pressure on which they can usually depend was for once in vain with a surprising number of members. They would not vote as their leader required, and what might befall him in consequence—well, that was for himself to consider.

The point of the dispute is plain enough. It is believed that very critical decisions will soon have to be taken, especially on the Polish question and on the Japanese question. The view of the group by which Mr. Chamberlain speaks is that such decisive time is one for parliament to be on hand; what they suspect is that Mr. Chamberlain and his colleagues in the cabinet, looking ahead, prefer to have parliament at such a time scattered widely, leaving the settlement—which may well be a considerable settlement—to the executive alone.

The press of the Axis Powers, and the speeches of the Axis leaders have perhaps some light to cast on the matter.

What is obviously bothering Mr. Churchill and his friends is the doubt as to how far this is mere propagandist talk, and how far the talkers have something to go upon. Mr. Churchill too has memories of last year, and he does not relish that story of the fate of Czechoslovakia as it is told either by the Axis newspapers or the radio or for that matter by Mr. Chamberlaind and M. Daladier.

This is the reason why the Churchill group was so insistent on staying near Westminster, even in the hot days.

Parliament with a conscience, and a sense of public responsibility, making itself something of a nuisance to those who prefer to be alone, is among the more wholesome signs of an age whose signs have been disturbing.

City Church Activities

PRESBYTERIANS HOLD SERVICES

Presbyterian churches in various parts of this city will be active on Sunday in ministering to congregations.

At First Presbyterian church, 105 street, south of Jasper avenue, Rev. Rose K. Cameron will return to the pulpit after an absence of several weeks. He will preach at both services. At 11 a.m. he will speak on Religion, Law and Love and at 7:30 p.m. will speak on A Powerful Church.

Rev. R. J. Burton, the minister, will conduct the service at Strathcona Presbyterian church at 11 a.m.

At Westmount and Rupert street churches, divine worship will be held at 11 a.m.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Mind" is the subject of the lesson-sermon at all Christian Science churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Romans 11:34, 36. One of the scriptural citations is "And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord," (Mark, 12:29). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy is: "The First Commandment is my favorite text. It demonstrates Christian Science. It inculcates the tri-unity of God, Spirit, Mind. It signifies that man shall have no other spirit or mind but God, eternal good, and that all good shall have one Mind. The divine Principle of the First Commandment bases the Science of being, by which man demonstrates health, holiness and life eternal." (p. 340).

CHURCHES JOIN FORCES SUNDAY

Union services of McDougall United and First Baptist churches will be continued on Sunday. Rev. A. K. McMinn, minister of McDougall church, will be in charge.

At 11 a.m. in McDougall church, the two congregations will meet and Mr. McMinn will speak on The Sight that Settles Things.

At 7:30 p.m. the service for both congregations will be held at First Baptist church, with Mr. McMinn speaking on The Religion that Suits Everybody.

McDougall church choir will give leadership in praise.

MISSION ENDS SUMMER CAMP

With happy memories, and renewed health of body and spirit, well over three hundred persons have been the guests of All Peoples' Mission at its fresh air camp on Moonlight Bay.

Four camps: boys, girls, mothers, babies and young people, have been held with an attendance in the girls' camp alone of approximately 100. At all the camps careful supervision of programs, swimming, diet, etc., have been the order of the day. Each camp followed its own theme. That of the boys for example was "The World-Family of God". Chapel services, in the beautiful open-air chapel have been an inspiration to many.

Fresh milk was provided daily, and the camp was gratified to have a visit from the provincial health officer to ensure everything was in perfect order. The water supply receives an annual check-up.

Dramatics, discussion periods, hand-craft classes, nature studies, woodcraft, music, athletics—all these things have been found on every program. Perhaps in point of short interest the mothers' camp holds first place. They, and the kiddies with them, get so much real pleasure out of the time that it is a pleasure to do things for them, although of course every camp has its own particular point of interest. The lists of campers cover the entire city. No distinctions are made.

LUTHERANS TO MEET SUNDAY

Missouri Synod Lutherans, representing seven parishes in the area between Walsh and Red Deer, will congregate in the Wetaskiwin arena on Sunday, August 20, for a mass-celebration commemorating the arrival of some 600 Saxon Lutherans in the State of Missouri. These Lutherans who had left their homeland in Germany because of religious intolerance and persecution on the part of the Saxon State Church, and who had come to our shores in quest of religious liberty and freedom, formed the nucleus of a church-body which in 1847 was organized as the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio, and other states. This church-body now numbers over one and a quarter million baptized souls, and is represented, besides in the United States and Canada, in South America, India, China, and Africa. It also maintains connections in several European countries.

Speakers at the Wetaskiwin celebration will be the Rev. O. H Schmidt, of Valparaiso, Indiana, and the Rev. W. C. Eifert of Leduc. Pastor Schmidt is a former pastor of the Zion Lutheran church, Wetaskiwin, and will be welcomed by a host of his former parishioners. Pastor Eifert is president of the Alberta and the British Columbia District of the Missouri Synod. The program of services will begin promptly at 11 a.m. and after a noon recess will continue at 2:30 o'clock.

YOUTH FREED DRIVE COUNT: BENCH WARNS

D. M. W. Roy Dismissed on Charge of Dangerous Driving Here

D. M. W. Roy, 20-year-old city youth, was dismissed on a charge of dangerous driving, but warned to "let this be a lesson to you," by Mr. Justice Howson at a special session of the criminal court here Friday afternoon.

Charge against the youth arose out of an accident at the intersection of 118 avenue and 90 street in which an auto driven by Roy crashed into a bicycle ridden by Arthur Hardy, an elderly man, who was injured, but not severely.

Police evidence was that Roy's car showed skid marks for 120 feet back from the point of contact. Police said this indicated a speed of at least 50 miles per hour. Evidence of eye witnesses on this point was contradictory, however, as it was also on the question as to whether Hardy had signalled his intention to turn before the crash occurred.

BENEFIT OF DOUBT

Mr. Justice Howson told Roy he was giving him the benefit of the doubt. "There is a tendency, especially among youths, to regard a speed of 50 miles per hour as not dangerous. But it is far too fast if dangers arise. However, while there is a suspicion that you were travelling fast, there is not sufficient for me to find you guilty. But you are exceedingly fortunate that the victim was not injured more than he was. And you may let this experience be a lesson to you."

Roy was represented by Stanley H. McClung, K.C. J. W. McClung prosecuted.

Opposes Strike

Opposition to a school tax strike in Sturgeon municipality was expressed Friday by H. M. Rigney, farmer of that district and secretary of the U.F.A. organization at that point. He expressed himself as in sympathy with the provincial government's desire to see all classes of school children receiving proper education, "But I do not think the present set-up gives enough democracy to the school district." He added that he could see no reason why a remedy might not be devised for this.

City Man Wins Many Laurels For Alberta Poultry Trade: Takes High Congress Honors

By KEN METHERAL

Alberta has long been recognized as a leading agricultural province. Her cattle command top prices on every market in the world; Herman Trelle, of Wembley, placed the name Alberta right at the top of the list of wheat producing countries; Alberta butter, eggs, cheese and other farm products are among the finest in the world, but it took a middle-aged Edmonton barber to place Alberta foremost as a poultry-producing province.

George F. Henbest, of 8112 118 avenue, president of the Edmonton Poultry and Pet Stock Association, and one of the Dominion's leading authorities on poultry breeding, exhibiting and judging, blazoned the names of Alberta and Edmonton in bold type in the poultry annals of the world when he captured world's championship honors with a hen exhibited at the seventh World's Poultry Congress recently concluded at Cleveland and gave one of the finest displays of judging ever witnessed at the Congress.

GOLDEN HARVEST

Long hours of study, research and practical experiments over a period of more than 40 years has given Mr. Henbest the knowledge necessary for the prominent position he holds among the world's foremost poultrymen. And now he is reaping a golden harvest from his labors.

It was those long hours of labor that enabled him to produce a bird perfect enough to outclass the best fowl raisers from all corners of the world had to offer; it gave him the knowledge necessary

Howson Stable Gets Belgians

Stable of Mr. Justice Howson is being supplemented by two more purebred Belgians which reached the city in a car lot of imported Percherons brought to Edmonton by Mitchell and Reith, horse importers. The Belgian fillies were bred by Robert Enedecker of Altoona, Iowa, and are grand-daughters of the 17,000 pound Percheron beat known sire of the breed, and are sisters of Ivondale Farceur, the international grand champion stallion.

THE QUESTION

After having toiled up the steps on McDougall hill, just south of the Macdonald hotel, Julian G. Squires of 9517 102A avenue, decided that something should be done about it and submitted the question: "What day, August 23, was announced on Saturday. Speakers will include S. W. Calvert, M.L.A. for Victoria and William Tomyn, M.L.A. for Whitford. Floyd M. Baker, M.L.A. for Clover Bar will give an illustrated lecture showing lantern slides of Alberta industries, the treasury branch and interim program.

THE PLACE

At the top of McDougall Hill.

THE ANSWERS

MIKE RADOMSKI, retired: Boy gully, that's a good idea. Then we could ride up, hey? That would be better for bettors. It is a long way to walk up and it is too far to ride around on the street car.

H. HORROCKS, clerk: I've heard hundreds of people say that we need a moving staircase here. Of course, when the bus starts running up McDougall hill it will make some difference. But I'm willing to bet that a moving staircase would do a good business.

IRENE KUSEK, school girl: Gee you mean one of those moving staircases? That would be swell. Would you have another staircase which would run down, too?

E. EASTERBROOK, salesman: They used to have one, you know, years ago. I don't know why they did away with it. I'd be glad to pay a nickel to ride up these steps anytime.

MRS. C. VANDERMYE, housewife: That would be a fine idea. You really have to walk up those steps about every day to understand just how bad they are. You never get used to them, you just know they're there and have to make the best of it.

W. FOSTER, printer: It would be okay provided they could build it without spending any to the taxpayers' load. But with most of these things the taxpayer has to foot the bill.

BUTCH, somebody's dog: Nope. It sure me okay the way it is. If they had one of those fancy moving things Boyd probably put on a sign "No dogs allowed."

T. H. Elliott of Vancouver, divisional manager of the West-Kootenay Power and Light company, leaves Edmonton Saturday night by TCA to return to the western city after a brief business visit here.

Through The Mill

Saturday is a quiet day in police court, but as far as the government is concerned, it is a profitable one. Although court lasts only about half-an-hour, they do a brisk business in traffic offences which nets the olde treasury branche about 24 bucks.

Biggest single contribution is $10, from a trucker who was indiscreet enough to be caught by the police while carrying passengers. It is okay to carry passengers provided you have a passenger vehicle license or if you are sure of not being caught—but these coppers get around and one can never be sure.

Another citizen who just couldn't see any reason for giving the government a hand from the depression was picked up by the patrol in spite of the fact that he has put out the buck and bought his license. One cent answered another two bucks just to remind him that the law is not fooling when it says either—or else. This brings his total up to 12 bucks.

Another citizen who does not dim his lights while passing another vehicle discovers too late that the passing vehicle contains the cops. They are fining three bucks and costs other three bucks costs. Then three others who do not bother to see that their automobiles are sporting tail lights are assessed two bucks each, which may sound like chicken feed but it all mounts up.

Grant McConachie, president of Yukon Southern Air Transport, is scheduled to arrive at Cooking Lake about 6 p.m. Saturday flying the new float-equipped Barkley-Grow homebuilt aircraft which the company has just bought. McConachie flew east to Detroit to take delivery of the plane earlier this week. It is the third of these sleek, speedy all-metal machines to be purchased by the company this year.

The machine cruises at 190 miles per hour and will be used on the twice-weekly Edmonton - Whitehorse service. The other machines, which are wired equipped will be used between the Peace River and Vancouver and the Peace River and Edmonton.

Planning to beg themselves a mess of nice fresh grizzley a party of four Texans are expected by Dr. and Mrs. O. W. Essinger of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, are bound for Dead Man's Lake to the heart of the wildest part of northern British Columbia 150 miles northwest of Fort St. John. The party includes G. B. Parr, Dan Evans, D. C. Cheek, John Thurtheim, and William H. McGriffin. They will fly north in a Yukon Southern plane Monday.

The big Bellanca, CF-AWR, formerly operated by Mackenzie Air Service for Edmonds Mines, and which was purchased recently by Canadian Airways when they took over the Edmonds freighting contract, has been completely overhauled, repainted in the familiar silver black and orange of C. A. L. It will be flown by Punch Dickins and Con Farrell Saturday preparatory to being put into north service.

Handsome Fall Drapes You Can Make Easily

Arched Valance Gives Height

Rich looking drapes and an arched valance—sure to give height distinction to your living-room windows! These draperies are easy to make, too, and will look lovely in rayon taffeta or sateen of soft gold.

To make the valance just sew three overlapping ruffles to a foundation. Finish smartly with tasseled cord in brown or in a color matching your rugs or upholstery.

Then tack your valance to an arched cornice board as our diagram shows—a board that had best be covered with sateen for a truly trim appearance.

The side draperies will look handsome edged with cord and to give them body and richness make linings—an easy job really with professional tips. Let drapery extend ½ inch beyond lining at top and sides, 1 inch at bottom. Let bottom hems hang loose.

You can make all kinds of curtains inexpensively with the help of our 32-page booklet. Gives directions, diagrams for glass curtains, draperies, casement curtains. Tells how to cut, sew, finish and trim, make valances, cornices. Suggests color schemes, fabrics.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "New Ideas in Making Curtains and Draperies" to The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service, Edmonton, Alberta. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

HIDDEN METALS

A Bulletin Short Story Complete on This Page Every Saturday

By Charles J. McGuirk

WHEN the great plane took off at Albuquerque and headed West at 3:15 that afternoon, Father Millard and the other passengers knew they were already nearly an hour late and might not arrive in Los Angeles till way after 6 o'clock, instead of 4:36, their scheduled arrival time.

The fact did not bother the 66-year-old priest. Years before he had conquered the disturbing habit of impatience. An hour or a day early or late made little difference to him. His long apprenticeship to medicine and other sciences had enabled him to see the truth of the Scriptural observation that, "a thousand years is but an instant in His sight."

He, himself, was on a vacation which had been tactfully disguised as an errand by his Rector. He was to make a survey of the early Spanish missions in California and he was to look in upon a few hospitals for any of the new changes of surgical technique being used there.

He was in no such hurry to arrive at his destination as his presence in a fast, powerful plane might portend. He was there because he had once expressed a casual desire to travel in one so it had been made a part of his "errand!" But he liked the sensation.

And the reasons for the delay in leaving Albuquerque did not bother him, either, though he was the only passenger who knew them. It was February and they were headed into the terrain bounded roughly by Albuquerque, San Francisco and Salt Lake City which is known among flyers as "the graveyard of the passenger planes," because so many have perished there. Flying conditions were not as ideal as they might be at that moment. There was snow and sleet in the north and a low ceiling.

Likened Passengers To Bits Of Meteor

Perhaps, Father Millard thought, if the others knew this, they would not be so much annoyed as they were by the delay. People avoided danger. And they feared death—unduly, he who had seen so much of it, thought. Death was merely a physical change, possibly a release into a better world, to a reward. Both his faith and his experience had taught him that.

They were, however, annoyed and they showed their various ways. Father Millard, sitting in the rear and on the right side of the plane so that they were all in his field of vision, watched them, amused.

The plane's crew, Lee Wilson, the lean, tanned and slightly grizzled pilot, Ed Driscoll, his young co-pilot, who might have been cut from the same bolt of cloth, and Miss Graves—Martha, he believed her name was—the fair, laughing-eyed stewardess with the full lips and the strong jaw, knew of the danger. But he was the only one of the ten passengers who did. He wondered if the other nine would mind the delay so much, if they realized it. He wondered how they would face it or if they would face it at all.

The conceit flashed suddenly across his mind that the huge powerful plane was not a plane at all but a great chunk of ore flying through space. This chunk contained thirteen bits of hidden metal, unidentified, unassayed and unproven. This quality could be learned only by exposing them to the white-hot blast of a deadly peril. Their reaction to a crisis would determine it to themselves and to the world. How would they come out of such a crisis? Would they prove coins of copper, silver, gold or platinum? Or would they be found spurious, as coins made up largely of base metals?

The conceit was so ridiculous that he smiled at it and chided himself for possessing it. Nevertheless, he followed it up by studying each passenger and trying to discover, or at least to guess, what quality, what metal they contained.

He found that he would have committed himself without reserve on only two of the thirteen. They were Wilson, the pilot, and Driscoll, the co-pilot. It would be safe to say that both contained plenty of iron.

The young stewardess, looking very efficient and pretty in her trim uniform as she moved among the disgruntled passengers, smoothing them down, might assay plenty of good metal. She was obviously in her very early twenties yet she had submitted successfully to a rigid discipline to become a registered nurse.

Weighed Heiress—Found Her Wanting

What about the others?

His eyes turned from the pretty stewardess to the front seat to rest upon a tall, blonde, long-eyed, insolent girl a year or so older than Miss Graves. She was, he knew, Barbara Leach, heiress to the fabulous Leach fortune and one of the richest women in the world. Immediately, he weighed her and found her wanting. One thought her beautiful but it was a beauty which had been enhanced to its utmost by studious care so that it seemed greater than it really was. And she had arrogance. But no strength. Her best metal, he decided, was the money she possessed.

Beside her, carrying on an amused and slightly superior conversation was Mace Wallace, a reporter who was on his way to California to cover the recent floods for a wire service. He was of middle-height and heavily built, dark and loose-mouthed. Not much older than one of Father Millard's own seniors, he possessed a cynicism too old for his years. He might reach for a coin and find little metal.

Behind these two sat Paul Stoddard, a famous industrialist, and George Elwood, his pale, rabbitty secretary who weakly waved a toothbrush mustache as a badge of his masculinity. Stoddand was massive-jawed, keen-eyed, intolerant and hard. There was no give in his face. His body was that of an athlete going into middle age. Here, Father Millard smiled to himself, were two opposites. Stoddard was at least iron, possibly gold. Elwood, at the best, was tin.

Into the old priest's moving gaze fell Tony Barone, the black-haired, white-skinned passenger who had boarded the plane at Chicago. Father Millard bristled. The man was about thirty and around him hung the alert stillness of the congenital murderer. His eyes were cold with not a speck of mercy in them. His mouth was a slit. But there must, Father Millard unwillingly admitted, be iron in the professional killer he believed Barone was.

It was a relief to turn from him to Ethel Bourne, famous Broadway actress, whose exotic beauty managed to rise above an aura of persistent drunkenness. On her way to Hollywood under a fabulous contract, she moved in an alcoholic mist which blurred her lovely features and thickened her meticulous diction. But her sophistication flashed through her drunkenness as she replied to a tentative advance of Barone's.

"You didn't have to board a plane to climb out of your natural habitat," she drawled. "Your first step on firm ground was sufficient. You belong in a swamp."

Wit, Father Millard decided, beauty of a flashy kind, but no metal harder than talc. She was a charming ewe, forever straying in and out of the flock.

Then there was "Mr." Tolliver, as he had drawlingly and apologetically introduced himself, when he boarded the plane at Armarillo, a tall, bronzed Westerner with a large black drooping mustache. An American of the outdoor type, with no imagination but some animal cunning. Possibly there was enough metal in him to sustain existence but no more.

And Mr. (Pa) John and Mrs. (Ma) Sarah Creston, an Iowa farmer and his wife on their way West from their farm to visit their middle-aged children and their grandchildren in Long Beach. Here at least, was a toil-worn dignity. And Pa had iron. But Ma had little. She was too dependent upon her husband.

And himself?

He was suddenly embarrassed. He tried to laugh his answer away. What difference did it make?

But a still voice persisted. It said, "You have presumed to judge others of God's creatures. Now, judge yourself."

So, ashamed, he looked in upon himself, striving to judge as impartially and as harshly as he had judged the others. He thought back fifty years and saw a youth burning with a zeal so great that it was an obsession to become a priest.

He thought of the twenty-nine years he had been one and could remember only a few hard battles with human temptations. These already had lost their strength in the fierce fire of his ambition. The one human failing he ruefully acknowledged now he had not killed was his tendency to judge others. That had survived thousands of his own mistakes and millions of those of others as told to him in the confessional and two years on French battlefields with the American army.

His meditation induced a melancholy which he sought to ease by reading his office. But he could not concentrate upon the Latin words. He closed the book and thrust it into his pocket and turned his gaze out the window.

They were flying at an altitude of a thousand feet or so over a terrain that was rapidly growing more mountainous. The sky was a leaden gray, mottled under an appearance of clearness. It was a snow sky. There were deep cloud shadows in the northwest toward which they were heading. Father Millard pretended to study it, but he was really thinking of his sin of presumption.

Thoughts Nettled In Personal Things

In the cockpit, Lee Wilson lounged in his seat, with his hands and feet engaged in the controls, his eyes on the complicated instrument board with its maze of meters and indicators. His ears stretched for the droning voice that came in at regular intervals. While he guided the big plane, his thoughts were nettled in personal things. The vibration of the engines were like the throbbing of his own heart.

He thought of Martha Graves, the laughing-eyed young stewardess, and, with wonder, at the way she had taken possession of his thoughts. He had never felt like this about a woman before and he had known many women.

He was ten years older. Was that what had made her hesitate when he asked her to marry him? He knew it wasn't. He knew the real reason was Ed Driscoll, sitting there beside him. He was more her type and her age. Oh, well. He would know where he stood at the end of the trip. Martha had promised to give him her decision then. Meanwhile, he wished Ed Driscoll, the worst of luck.

"Take over, Ed," he said.

He looked down overside at a ragged, wooded terrain. They were in the Grand Canyon country and close to the end of the trip. Another hour and a quarter would see them in. But this would be no place to crash. The landscape stood on its head or dove deep into the earth. It was a mass of chasms and tall peaks with not a straight level surface fit for landing within a hundred miles. The sky had become a dirty gray and might melt into snow. The ceiling was getting lower.

The ship lurched and caught herself. The voice which had been droning from the speaker at intervals did not come in. A glance at the barograph showed a sudden downward fluctuation to 3,500 feet and even as he looked, he felt the ship climb as Ed reached for altitude. Driscoll was sitting negligently nursing the controls but his jaw was tight.

"We're off the beam," he said casually.

"All right," Lee said, and settled back in his seat. "I'll take her. Call Los Angeles. Keep calling."

Ed Driscoll, too, had been thinking of Martha Graves. He was thinking that if he didn't get her, he would die. It was the first time he had ever been in love.

Martha Reassures Timid Passengers

In the cabin, Martha Graves, soothing the passengers, joking with them and bringing them cigarettes, tea, tried to decide between Lee and Ed. She was a ninny not to be able to do it. But they were both so wonderful.

She felt like a daughter toward Lee. He had been so kind and helpful to her when she first began to ride ten months ago. He was her first and only pilot. She would have known she loved him if Ed had not come along as the new co-pilot three months ago. Ed did things to her. She could feel herself trembling whenever he was near her. Sometimes, for this she hated him.

She gazed out the windows. It was getting cold and rougher outside. Was that snow she saw? It was! A flurry but it would grow. Maybe into a blinding storm. The plane lurched, slowed, dropped, started to climb. She looked up quickly. All the passengers were staring at her. Most seemed to ask an explanation. Mr. Stoddard's gaze was accusing. Father Millard's was amused and reassuring. Mrs. Creston's was frightened, almost panicky.

"It's nothing, Mrs. Creston," she said, but she was addressing all the others. "Just an air bump."

But she wondered.

Newsman's Voice Stirs Miss Leach

Barbara Leach was excited. Sitting there, seemingly calm in her chair and gazing out the window at mountain, canyon and interminable stands of uncut timber on an upended landscape, she thought that she had never heard a voice that stirred her so as did that of Mace Wallace, the newspaperman beside her.

It had done so the first time she heard it and that was only eleven hours ago. Yet she felt she had known him always. It was strange, too, about his voice. It wasn't smooth or cultured. It was harsh, sometimes acid with scorn.

Shifting her gaze from below her to the slaty sky outside, she gathered him in the side of her vision. His tousled black-haired head, set so sturdily on his broad shoulders. His large, generous mouth. His wise unbelieving eyes. The little black hairs on the back of his broad, short-fingered hands.

"What would I do if I had all your money?" He repeated her question. "I don't know. Nobody knows what they'll do any time they face a new experience. Maybe I'd get drunk. Maybe, I'd start another afternoon paper in New York. Maybe I'd try to write. But I'd rather not have it. It might cramp me. I'd never know whether people were my friends for myself or for my money."

"I know that feeling," she agreed softly.

He could have bitten off his tongue. He should never have said it. The poor kid! She must be like that all the time. Fortune hunters chasing her all over the world. Here she was now on her way to Los Angeles just to see the Santa Anita handicap. Alone because she could not trust the friendship of any one.

Well, she could have him for a friend, if she wanted him. And to hell with her money. He'd like her in spite of it. More than like her, he told himself with sudden shocked surprise. "Why, you poor sap!" he told himself. "You're in love with her! Ain't that smart?"

The plane lurched, dropped sickeningly. His hands went out of themselves to clasp hers. He looked at the stewardess. She was smiling generally and reassuringly at all of them. The plane righted itself, began to climb. Flushing, he snatched his hands away.

Paul Stoddard Becomes Angry

Paul Stoddard was angry. He was almost always angry, because he was a bully at heart. But now he had a specific cause for his irritation. The plane would be more than an hour late and that would mean a postponement in introducing a new speed-up system in his factories.

The cause of the delay was, of course, human, some mistake in charting their course or in refueling. It was always the human element which prevented full efficiency. Like this poor thing, Elwood, his secretary. He might better have brought a dictograph. The results would be better. Half the letters he had dictated to Elwood would have to be revised.

George Elwood, colorless and nervous, wished passionately that his wife was here with him. He missed her most dreadfully. She wasn't well. She needed better medical care than she was getting. He wished he could work up the courage to ask Mr. Stoddard for a raise. But he never would. If he asked for one, Mr. Stoddard would fire him. Suddenly he was very apprehensive in this plane.

Tony Barone sat with his feet under him and his leg muscles set to spring. He was unnaturally still except for his little black eyes which darted about the plane and out of it into the leaden sky. They were the eyes of a trapped rat, intelligent, alert and merciless. He did not like being in a plane. He wouldn't be in it only Al Torreo had ordered him to take it from Chi to L. A.

"On account you knocked off that dick, Michaels, in San Antonio last May, Johnny Casso's got another job for you, Tony," Al told him. "It has to be done quick because the guy's a witness against Johnny in a murder rap. There's five C's in it for you. Want it?"

"Sure." Tony said because five hundred dollars was a good price for bumping off a guy thee days. It was even worth taking the chance of being picked up in Texas for killing Detective George Michaels who had been too hot on the trail of Johnny Casso. Johnny was a drug runner. "When do I start?"

"Now," Al said. "You just got time to catch the L. A. plane. This guy will be called to testify the day after tomorrow and if he starts singin', it'll be just too bad for Johnny."

So here he was in this lousy kite, this flyin' coffin. He hated it. And he smelled a cop somewhere. He could not place him but a sixth sense told him there was a cop somewhere near. He'd pick that Tolliver guy only he was too much of a rube. He was too dumb and there was no gun bulge on the left side of his coat. He was no dick.

Pilots Sat Tensely At Plane's Controls

Tony was wrong. Tolliver was a Texas Ranger and he was on that plane to pick up Tony, dead or alive, for the murder of Detective Michaels in San Antonio nine months ago. And he was also wrong about the gun. A regulation six-gun was resting between his pants and his shirt in front and well covered by his vest. Ranger Tolliver's eyes were dumb but very cold.

In the cockpit, Lee Wilson and Ed Driscoll sat tense at their posts fighting a storm of snow and sleet. A heavy sheet of ice had formed on the wings which the de-icers could not move. The ship lost altitude but so imperceptibly that it could not have been noticed in the cabin.

Yet every one in the cabin seemed to sense the crisis before it rose. The passengers sat stiffly in their seats, ignoring the studied confidence of Martha Graves, the stewardess, who moved quietly about her duties. Father Millard began to pray silently, even as he realized that Martha had exceeded his doubtful expectations. Her metal was stronger than iron. It was steel.

In the cockpit, Ed Driscoll, sitting beside Lee Wilson, waiting to take over, heard Lee say quietly:

"I guess this is it, Ed. I'm trying for a landing. If you come out and I don't, take care of Martha. Tell her now."

"Blind?" Driscoll asked.

"Just about," Wilson admitted. "But I'm hoping we're over the emergency landing field seven miles outside of Stockton. We've got to be. It's a zero-zero ceiling and the ice is pulling us down. Tell Martha."

"Why?" Mace Wallace's cutting voice sliced through the snow. "Because you and we found out you were yellow?"

From his vantage point in the rear of the plane, Father Millard sensed the situation immediately as Driscoll came from the cockpit into the cabin and spoke pleasantly to the stewardess. He saw the girl tense and then smile stiffly. Years of objective thought and study had brought to him a selflessness that was almost complete. So the idea of personal danger never occurred to him as he hitched forward in his seat to watch.

A quick glance through the window at the swirling ice-filled darkness told him the message must be that the pilot was preparing for a forced landing. When the passengers were informed of it, they would have entered the crucible. What metal would each reveal?

Were Landing On Emergency Field

The co-pilot disappeared into the cockpit and Martha, her smile now more natural, snapped the startled Miss Leach's safety belt about her. As it clicked, the eyes of the heiress flew to the reporter and he grinned as Martha did the same for him.

"Maybe I'm cock-eyed," he admitted, "but I think it's silly to lock us in the barn after the horse has dived."

"The horse isn't diving," Martha smilingly corrected him. "We're landing on an emergency field."

Wallace started to argue but the stewardess' gaze held his and he seemed to read her message for he shrugged his shoulders and looked interestingly downward through the window.

The stewardess was moving swiftly about her duties now. She snapped the belts of Stoddard, the financier, and Elwood, his rabbitty secretary, and as both men turned in their seats to follow her, the priest got his first surprise.

For Elwood's bewildered eyes steadied as he realized the danger. His mouth tightened and he hunched himself together as though preparing for a plunge into icy water. He was facing the inevitable with an animal courage which must have been buried deep within him.

But Stoddard's massive features suddenly yeasty were dissolved in stark terror. They seemed to run together. His athlete's body was shrivelled and a whimpering, mewing sound came from his palsied mouth. There was no metal in the man at all! He was a gelatinous mass of fear.

The right hand of Tony Barone, the killer, moved instinctively toward his shoulder holster, as though the gun it held was his answer to any danger. But the feel of it evidently did not bring him reassurance for as Martha snapped his belt, his voice rose in a tremendous whine.

"On, God," he pleaded, "don't kill me! Please, God!"

Ethel Bourne, always the actress, sensed the crisis through a rosy alcoholic mist and cloaked her sudden terror with as sudden a gallantry. As the safety belt snapped, she turned and smiled at Father Millard.

"I'm trying to think of a good exit line," she informed him.

"Bless me, Father, for I have sinned."

The thin, whimpering whines of Stoddard and Barone echoed her.

Tolliver pulled his bulky body and snapped his own belt about him with no more apparent feeling that he would have shown in strapping on his holster.

Pa Creston dissolved into frightened tears as the stewardess snapped his belt and Ma Creston's hand flew past Martha's body to grasp and squeeze her husband's.

"There, there, Pa," she soothed as she would have soothed a baby. "Don't cry. It'll all be over in a minute."

Now the stewardess was at the priest's side and Father Millard shot out of his seat, grasped her around the body and swung her into the seat he had just left with a strength and speed that belied his years.

"You are young, child," he told her gently as he snapped the safety belt about her. "Be quiet for a little."

The plane's sudden steep banking strained the belt against her and tore her angry fingers from the straps.

"Whatever happens, I love you, Mace!" Barbara Leach's firm clear voice rang out as the plane dived into an iced darkness which scraped against it.

"Into Thy hands, O Lord, I commend our spirits," Father Millard prayed through the shrill, horror-laden screams of the financier and the killer. "Oh Lord, Jesus Christ, preserve our spirits——"

A terrific impact hurled the priest against the back of a seat and thence to the floor and the darkness of oblivion.

Big Plane Made Perfect Landing

For an instant, Father Millard thought he was merely awaking from a deep and troubled dream, but as his senses steadied, he saw he was lying on his own overcoat in a wide ice-laden space. The taste of whiskey was on his lips. Martha's hand pressed against his forehead.

"Father Millard," she said.

"Yes, child."

"Are you all right? Have you any pain?"

"No," he told her after an explanatory pause. "My head is clearing. Where are the others? Is anybody——"

"No," she smiled. "You were the only one scratched. You bumped your head against the seat as we dived. Mr. Wilson made a beautiful landing. We're on an emergency field not far from Stockton."

His head throbbed as he climbed to his feet and saw the plane. Its shadow was a dark blur in a dim and swirling world of driving snow. The other passengers were huddled near it. It was bitter cold. He walked to the group and came within the sound of Lee Wilson's voice.

"There is no shelter here," the pilot was saying, "so we may as well get back into the plane and wait. There is no danger. We had a hard landing, but the plane and the engines are all right. We'll get out of here as soon as there is any visibility, possibly about daylight."

"You shouldn't have taken off at Albuquerque in the first place," Paul Stoddard declared. His massive jaws were locked. His keen eyes were again intolerant and hard. There was no give in his face. He had, it was evident, regained his courage. "You should be punished for wilfully endangering the lives of twelve people, thirteen, including yourself. I am going to see that there is an investigation."

"But our weather reports was all right," the pilot protested. "This is just one of those sudden storms that strike at this season of the year."

"Nevertheless," Stoddard coldly insisted, "something should be done about a thing like this. Another pilot, perhaps, put in charge of this plane."

"Why?" Mac Wallace's cutting voice sliced through the snow. "Because you and we found out you were yellow? Or did you know it before? You haven't any kick coming, Stoddard. People like you shouldn't get into a plane. If it weren't for Wilson's miraculous flying neither you nor the rest of us would be here now. We'd be scattered over about five miles and the plane would be hanging on some tree. But you go ahead and make your complaint and I'll write the story of how the great Paul Stoddard acted when we though we were crashing."

"Oh, Mace," Barbara Leach murmured, "you're wonderful!"

"I think we should all have a drink," Ethel Bourne insisted. "Especially Mr. Stoddard. I never saw so big a man so frightened. I'll be glad to describe his actions to any investigating committee."

"Perhaps I spoke hastily," Stoddard hastened to say, his massive features again yeasty. "I really have no intention of mentioning the matter, I'm willing to let it drop."

Chunks Of Ore Now Bits Proven Metal

Father Millard turned to watch the effect of the financier's words on Lee Wilson. But the pilot was not listening. He was watching Martha and Ed Driscoll, the co-pilot. They stood together, their hands clasped. The priest caught the quick pain in the pilot's eyes and knew that what he had seen had killed a dream.

They were climbing into the plane when Tony Barone caught the flash of Tolliver's badge. Father Millard saw his hand dart inside his coat and appear with the gun in it. But even as he moved to strike up the killer's arm, the Ranger's gun covered the killer.

"Put it down, Barone," he drawled and, as the gun thudded to the ground, "Now come over here till I slip the bracelets on you. You and I are going to be as close as twins till we get back to Texas."

Two hours later, the storm subsided as quickly as it had arisen. Dawn revealed a clear and cloudless blue sky and at full daylight, the great plane rose thundering and headed west.

In the cabin, the passengers had resumed their places. To all seeming, they were the same people who had started the flight from Alburquerque. But Father Millard knew that was not so. They had started as chunks of unproven ore. Now, they were each a bit of proven metal.

Lee Wilson, the pilot, Ed Driscoll, the co-pilot, and Martha Graves, the stewardess, were pure gold. In peril they had offered their lives for others. Barbara Leach, the heiress, Mace Wallace, the reporter, Ethel Bourne, the actress, George Elwood, the rabbitty secretary, Ma Creston and Tolliver, the Ranger, were of iron and steel. Pa Creston was good metal with some dross in him. Stoddard, the financial giant, and Tony Barone, the professional killer, were base metal with no value in them. And he, himself—

Surprised and a little frightened, he realized he did not know what metal was in him. Casting back, he tried to remember his own feelings and sensation at the moment of great urgency which had brought to light the hidden metals in the others. All that he could remember was an intense curiosity which had made him forget himself completely.

Ruefully, he admitted to himself, that he had learned little of his own soul and less of the souls of the others. All that he had proven was that human beings were unpredictable. A just anger against himself was followed by a deep humility.

"Dear Lord," he prayed fervently, "forgive me for presuming to judge my fellow men."

Murder on the Boardwalk

By Elinore C. Stone

SYNOPSIS

Yesterday: Unable to locate her cousin, Christine moves to the hotel named in her mysterious telephone conversation. Almost down to her last cent, Christine accepts Wilmet's offer, agrees to do sketches at his Boardwalk concession.

CHAPTER III

CHRISTINE hurried back to the hotel to assemble her sketching materials. She was to meet her new employer by the Twentieth Century Pier. . . . The new employer's name, she had learned, was Wilmet—George Wilmet.

When it had come to giving her own name, Christine had hesitated with an unprecedented reticence. Then, almost as if someone else had spoken, she heard herself blurting out, "Nevin—Grace Nevin."

Hurrying along the crowded Boardwalk, avoiding the omnipresent wheel-chairs, the loitering pedestrians, and the pigeons that swarmed under foot, eager for the grain thrown them from the benches that lined the promenade, Christine tried to explain her squeamishness about giving her name. Eventually she excused it on the grounds that Cousin Emma would be embarrassed to find that a Thorenson was working on the Surf City Boardwalk.

She found her workshop to be a small booth next door to the Twentieth Century Pier—one of the noisiest amusement centers along the Boardwalk. It was several feet below the level of the walk, and you went down to it by a ramp at one side. The "studio" was frugally furnished with an easel, a camp stool, and at the rear, on the beach side, with a bench some eight feet long, having a slab of concrete for a top.

The place had apparently taken a beating from dampness and frost, for the walls were cracked and crumbling; and someone had recently mended the top of the bench and the floor about it with fresh cement, into which Christine's heel sank and stuck.

Mr. Wilmet, coming to her rescue, was nervously apologetic: "I'm so sorry, Miss Thorenson. I had to do some repairing."

Christine got out her sketching materials and prayed for a chance to use them.

When, after 15 minutes, no customers appeared, Christine suggested, "Nothing draws a crowd like the sight of someone working at an easel. Why don't I begin with the Maharajah of Bahawalpur—or whatever his name is?"

She indicated a figure that stood by one of the pillars of the pier.

He was, as Christine had intimated, a magnificent spectacle—his warm brown skin set off by a robe of some rich Oriental material and belted with a golden cord, through which was thrust an exquisitely chased dagger. About the head of the "maharajah" was draped a turban of bright silk, fastened with a single gem; and his slender brown feet were laced into jeweled sandals. He stood like a statue, his arms majestically folded, gazing with brooding brows out to sea.

Already Christine was at work; and almost immediately a curious crowd began to gather along the railing of the Boardwalk above.

As she sketched, she heard someone say, "She's drawing Chandra—you know—that Indian swami over there."

As if he had heard, the gorgeous Oriental turned, fixed his eyes upon Christine, and detached himself from his pillar. Although he was not a tall man, there was in his bearing an air of authority before which the crowd fell back. He moved to the railing and stood, looking down. . . . His eyes, Christine was surprised to find, were not dark, but a tawny brown, with lurking yellow lights.

At length the "swami" extended a hand and said in a voice astonishingly deep and resonant, "It is good. I will take it."

When Christine passed the sketch to him over the railing, he slipped a bill into her hand and turned away.

"Wait!" Christine called. "Your change—"

"I have [illegible] that it is good," he returned, and strode away.

A woman said, "Of course that was staged. These Boardwalk people advertise each other."

It did prove to be good advertising. Soon Christine was busy. For a while Mr. Wilmet hovered on the outskirts of the booth; but eventually he melted away into the crowd, and Christine did not see him again that day.

He had been surprisingly generous about her commission. Although she had worked only a little over a half day, it would be almost $4.

She must, however, look for cheaper quarters. She found a room on a side street, and having already committed herself as "Grace Nevin," she registered under that name, and hurried back to the Crestview to retrieve her belongings, and see if Cousin Emma had not sent some message.

But there was no message. Christine went upstairs, puzzled and uneasy. She told herself that it was this uneasiness which accounted for her strange feeling that something was amiss in her room.

She had unpacked very little the night before. Getting ready to move should not take long. . . . Nevertheless, she sat down, a frown between her brows.

The maid had finished her work here before she had returned from breakfast. There was no reason why anyone should have entered the room afterwards. . . . Nor why the bags should have been disturbed on their rack. . . . Yet they had been.

When Christine made an inventory of her few possessions, they were all in their places; yet her uneasiness persisted.

Descending in the crowded elevator, she was startled out of her preoccupation by murmured conversation behind her:

"It couldn't have happened if Emma Talbert had been there." . . . "She's been fighting this merger tooth and nail—and she owned enough shares to lick it single-handed. Why in God's name do you suppose she didn't come?"

The murmurs added unreasonably to Christine's uneasiness. Even if Cousin Emma did not take her responsibility as hostess in a life and death way, it was out of character for her to play truant when money was concerned.

Once established in her new lodgings, Christine's restlessness made the indoors unendurable. Going down to the street, she turned without conscious volition toward the brilliant lights of the Boardwalk, climbed the stairway that led from the street, and came out near the Twentieth Century Pier. The blare of a band and the shrieks of the crowd told her the shows must be in full swing. A little forlornly she stepped down into her own booth, next door, to listen to the band.

The booth was in almost total darkness; but a gleam of white caught Christine's attention. It proved to be a sheet of paper fastened to her easel. Carrying it to the lighted Boardwalk, she read:

"If you are worried—if you are unhappy—consult Chandra. Free public readings at the Temple of Truth every evening at 10."

Christine crossed the Boardwalk and sauntered along. A doorman, resplendent as a rear admiral, stood in front of the hotel just opposite her booth.

Then came a shooting gallery—so poorly patronized that the proprietor had leisure to follow Christine with an appraising stare. Afterwards: the window of the Paris Smart Shop, featuring one jade green hat and a cluster of violets; a small, glass-enclosed stage on which tiny mechanized mannequins displayed the fabrics of a manufacturer of synthetic cloth; a cosmetician's exhibit, in Chinese red and silver jar; a bowling alley; an auction room; an oculist's window, with a grotesquely animated replica of a pair of human eyes. At last she came to an entrance that looked like the facade of an Oriental temple.

Over this concession Christine read the words, "Temple of Truth."

Open Match Play?

Ducats vs. Cusses

City Man Champ

ON September 3 and 4 the cream of western Canada's professional and amateur golfers will do their durndest over the beautiful Mayfair course here for the Alberta open championship. It will see such amateur aces as Ken Black of Vancouver and Henry Martell match their strokes against the top-notch money players like Stan Leonard, Wood, Pat Fletcher, Madder of Spokane and a few more. The battle will be 72 holes of medal play.

With $700 of prize money making this coming open the richest yet staged in Alberta, the Alberta Golf Association has to think seriously about financial matters. In this respect it might not be a bad idea to give a bit of consideration to the possibility of making the open a match-play affair next year.

They are tinkering with this suggestion now down the U.S. Pacific coast. The reason is that the public seems to prefer watching match play to medal play—especially in an open where there is a chance for an amateur to trim a leading pro. The galleries always get a big kick out of that. Match play is unquestionably more dramatic than medal play since it concentrates the decisive matches for the galleries. The while entry on the other hand are theoretical contenders in medal play for the title until all cards for the final round are checked in.

The success of an open tourney depends to a large extent on the revenue derived from the galleries. If match play will increase this, it is worth some serious consideration.

Ducat In Time Saves Cusses

NEXT Friday brings the Regina Roughriders here to open the Western Football Conference against the Eskimos under the new floodlights at Clarke Stadium. The advance preferred seat sale has already soared to 150 more season tickets than were sold up until the first game last season. With decent weather, the first two games here are almost certain to be sell-outs.

Fans would be well advised to get themselves season ducats at once if they want to be certain of good seats and to avoid all the trouble and loss of time involved in standing in line to get tickets for each game. Season tickets bought now will ensure good seats in the main stand with considerably more comfort than the new bleachers offer. This main stand offers protection from the prevailing winds from the north-west and easy access. Season tickets also make it possible for groups of friends to be certain that they will be together through all the games.

All season tickets are made up now and those that have been reserved are ready at Booster Club headquarters, 207 Agency Building. The ticket committee would appreciate it if you will drop in and pick up yours as soon as possible.

A block of 500 children's season tickets have been set aside at a figure that places them within reach of almost all youngsters. Any one in attendance at public or high school, or any person 15 years of age and under will be able to obtain the children's rate.

Edmontonian English Champion

FOR the first time in history, a Canadian recently won a national amateur diving championship in England when Flying Officer D. Thom of the R.A.F. won the national one-metre springboard diving title at the Morecambe Stadium in competition with four of the finest springboard divers in England.

What is more, Thom is a former Edmonton boy who learned his diving at the West End pool here. He went to England two years ago and entered the Royal Aviation Force. Clippings from London papers state that the standard was remarkably high in this event and that the former Edmonton man turned in a brilliant performance in the 10 dives that were required. He won the title by a four-point margin over A. MacDonald of the Birmingham Diving Club.

You can hardly ask for any more striking proof of the excellency of Edmonton's swimming and diving instruction than the above feat of Flying Officer Thom.

CITY TRAPSHOOT MEET SCHEDULED FOR WEDNESDAY

City trapshooting honors will be at stake at the Edmonton Gun Club range on Wednesday evening when the city's best shots will gather in competition for the city championship.

The event will be made up of 50 birds at 16 yards and 50 birds from handicap. Keen competition is anticipated in view of the doubles having been taken out of this event and there is a large entry expected.

W. C. Davis is the present holder and is somewhat favored to repeat his championship performance.

Eskology

HAROLD SUTTON

Starting his second year in Western Conference football with the Eskimos, Harold Sutton has been showing enough stuff in preseason training to indicate that he will be a valuable man to the club in the coming campaign.

A punter of more than average ability, Sutton held his own with all backers in the Conference last year and the experience he gained then is showing in his all-round fine work in practices.

Born at Winnipeg in 1916, he came here with his family from Brandon in 1930. After attending public school at Brandon and Glenora and Oliver schools here, he entered Garneau High, where he played football for two years. Following graduation from high school, he performed in the backfield for Hi-Grads for two seasons.

Golf, swimming, badminton and hockey are other sports in which Sutton excels. He weighs 175 pounds and is six feet tall.

McSpaden Holds Open Lead; Martell Fails to Hit Stride

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Aug. 19.—Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., went serenely on his way toward the Canadian open golf championship Friday, maintaining his sub-par pace as the remainder of the field with only an odd exception floundered behind. At the half-way mark McSpaden was three strokes in front.

The Riverside Golf and Country Club layout, tough in the first round when four men creaked par, was even tougher yesterday despite ideal playing conditions and only the quiet-spoken McSpaden broke even figures again.

Jug shot a 69, one under, for a 36-hole total of 138 and a three-stroke edge on burly Ralph Guldahl of Madison, N.J.

HENRY "OFF" AGAIN

Henry Martell of Edmonton, finalist in the Canadian amateur and recent winner of the Ontario open, had 75-76—151. He had for company such good professionals as Bobby Gray of Toronto and Leo Diegel of Philmont, Pa., four times winner of the event, both 75-76—151.

Martell went out in 40, five over, and came back to get even on the home nine. He went two strokes over par on three holes, taking two sixes, and his only birdies, at the 12th and 14th, couldn't begin to overcome the strokes he already had yielded to par.

McSpaden shot almost as fine a round as when he got his 67, except that he was in occasional trouble in the rough and sand. He made up for his odd wildness with as fine recoveries as anyone in the original field of 82, down to 59 qualifiers for the $1,000 first prize, after Friday afternoon's play.

HAVE BEST CHANCE

The scoring within reasonable shooting distance of McSpaden was small but included two Canadian professionals making a strong bid to bring the title home for the first time since 1914. Stan Horne of Montreal and Arthur Hulbert of Toronto, one of the four to break 70 in the first round, were tied in third position with 141.

All alone with 144, after two 72's, was the surprising Jimmy Rimmer of Halifax, well in front for the special $100 prize for Maritime professionals and with a good chance to bag a share of the $3,000 prize money in the open proper. Rimmer formerly was pro at Jasper, Alta.

Top Canadian amateur with his first-round 70, Phil Farley dropped behind to Sandy Somerville of London, Ont., who staged a fine comeback on the last nine for a two-under 33, to finish at 73 and a 36-hole total of 143. Farley had an 80 Friday.

Stage All Set For Cosmopolitan Charity Tourney

The stage is all set for Edmonton's biggest golf tourney of the year in point of total entries—the Cosmopolitan club's charity tournament in aid of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. It will be played on Sunday, August 27.

Owing to huge entry received in the past, all entrants will play over their own courses. All you have to do to purchase a Cosmopolitan golf ticket, enter your name with the Cosmopolitan club starter at your own club, arrange your own game and time. Those not members of a club will be accommodated at one of the various clubs. Tickets may be obtained at Tom Campbell's "Smile" hat shop, Muckleston's beauty parlor, Robinet & Sons or from any member of the Cosmopolitan club.

The ladies' section of this big tourney will be played at the Prince Rupert course on Friday, September 1.

The usual lavish array of prizes for both good and bad golfers has been provided.

Rain Slows Track

SPRINGFIELD Ill., Aug. 19—A soggy track slowed up Grand Circuit trotters and pacers racing Friday in a 10-event program. Races run Thursday were left added to yesterday's card.

STROME BOY EASY VICTOR AT CALGARY

Lindsay Guild Punches Out Triumph Over Callaghan

CALGARY, Aug. 19—Winning the last thirteen rounds after the first two were even, Lindsay Guild of Strome, made it two straight over Mushy Callaghan of Calgary by gaining a 15-round decision over the "Riverside Wildcat" in the main and most interesting contest of a fistic program at the Canadian Legion Memorial Hall here last night.

This event, which produced a lot of one-sided action together with Phyl Palmer's third round technical knockout over Hugh Charleston of Drumheller, saved the situation as the first three events were listless.

In the main set-to Callaghan made his best showing in the first two rounds. After that it was merely a question of how often and how hard Guild could hit. And despite the fact he clouted "Mushy" at will, the courageous Riverside battler stayed the full 15 rounds to maintain his record of keeping off the canvas for a count.

Guild displayed far more science than he did in outpointing Callaghan in a previous bout, and while he packs a punch in his right, it is like a lot of others, not wicked enough to drive Callaghan off his feet.

SUMMARY OF BOUTS

Angus "Slim" McRae, 129, Calgary, scored technical knockout over Denver Kid, 126, Edmonton, in second round.

Bobby Hall, 117½, Calgary, knocked out Wally Baker, 116, Calgary, second round.

Phil Palmer, 118, Calgary, scored technical knock over Hugh Charleston, 118, Drumheller, third round.

Lindsay Guild, 160, Strome, Alta., outpointed Mushy Callaghan, 157, Calgary, 15 rounds.

Working Now

Never holder of an official title, but a consistent winner over champions and former titleholders was Billy Petrolle, in the days when he was raising a rumpus in the light and welterweight ranks. Which wasn't so very long ago. The "Fargo Express" is seen here busy at his present occupation as a worker in an iron and steel company. He still keeps his resin contact by managing and training amateurs.

BULLETIN CUP CANOE EVENT HERE SUNDAY

War Canoe Race Carded Over Saskatchewan River Course

Billed for Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, the Voyageurs' annual five-mile war canoe race from Whitemud Creek to the 106 street Bridge, is attracting considerable attention among paddlers and their friends.

The Bulletin Trophy, emplematic of river supremacy in distance war canoe racing, is again at stake and already four entries have been registered by the committee in charge. A new rule in effect this year restrict canoes used to the 16 ft. "Champlain" model. In previous years eight of any dimensions were eligible and a number of 18 ft canoes were used.

MAKES CLOSER RACE

The limiting of the size, it is felt, will make the race closer and will require greater skill in paddling, as the shorter models cut deeper into the water and, when heavily loaded, are harder to handle.

Among those already entered is last year's winning team of Len Wilson, Reg. Rault, Bob Cottle and Clinton Brown, while figured as the team to beat this year is that of Ben Lange, Harry Honey, Bert Foster and Ken McBryan, winners and runners-up of the Edmonton to Fort Saskatchewan doubles race on July 9th, who are out to make a clean sweep of both long-distance races and equal the record of Les Wilson who performed this feat a year ago.

The annual girl's doubles five miles doubles race, which is run each year in connection with the men's war canoe race, is scheduled to be run over the same course, 15 minutes after the men's event has started.

FORM PART OF SERIES

Added interest in both races is furnished by the fact that the events form part of a series of races sponsored by The Voyageurs in order to determine the men's and ladies' river champions for the current season. Final event will be a regatta scheduled for Lost Canyon, September 10.

Arrangements for Sunday's races are in the hands of Howard Wilson, chairman and the sports committee of Preston Giffen, Bob Copeman, Bert Wilson, Ed. Hunter and Ed. Howard.

Each Pool Captures One of Three Titles

By JACK DEAKIN

EDMONTON swimmers completed one of their most successful seasons in the water sport and only a select squad of swimmers, those entered in the Wm. Wrigley Western Canada championships at Saskatoon next week, will remain in training. Last night's gala was Edmonton's last for this year and completed the three-day provincial outdoor championships.

Keen rivalry between this city's three clubs again featured in Friday night's gala at the West End. Three championships were at stake and these were divided oven-Stephen between the clubs.

Bessie Smith, retaining her provincial ladies' diving championship, earned the West End Club triumph. Daisy Keen, winning the 50-yard sprint, gave East End another provincial title, while George Valpy of the South Side Club picked up his third provincial crown.

WIN 13 OF 14 TITLES

Including the four championships at the Wrigley swims at Sylvan Lake along with the 10 provincial crowns at stake here, Edmonton won 13 of the 14 titles. East End and South Side were the major winners. Each club had five championship triumphs while the West Enders had three such wins.

Jack Graves scored Calgary's lone triumph, winning the junior half mile at Sylvan Lake when Jimmy Billingsley was forced to the sidelines near the end of the race.

Rene Rawlins led the East End forces claiming three titles while George Valpy was the big title winner for the South Side Club, winning three times. Both Miss Rawlins and Valpy along with Dougie Matheson and possibly one or two more will go to Saskatoon for the Wrigley western championships.

Edmonton held away in the recent title swims because of the lack of entries from the southern part of the province. South swimmers offered the lack of transportation as their reason for not attending the swims. However, Edmonton would have remained top favorite had the south competed.

DOUG BEATS RECORD

One record took a beating at the West End tank. Doug Matheson set a new time for the men's half mile as he clipped 5 1-5 seconds off the old record. Matheson swam alone in the event, his one ambition being to break the old mark and this he accomplished in a most creditable manner.

A new time was set in the men's 220-yard relay race. However, no previous time had been recorded as officials marked one minute, 46 3-5 seconds as the new time.

Junior girls 50 yards—1, G. Swingle, W.E.; 2, E. Robertson, E.E.; 3, J. Wilkinson, S.S. Time, 32 3-5 seconds.

Girls 11 and under, 100 yards—1, B. Swingle, W.E.; 2, L. Cameron, S.S.; 3, M. Parnell, S.S. Time, 1 min., 21 4-5 secs.

Men's 220-yard relay (4 men 50 yards each)—1, West End; 2, South Side; 3, East End. Time, 1 min. 46 3-5 seconds. This is new time for this race as it is first time such race is recognized.

MASKED REVUE began moving up in the last half mile, closed with a burst of speed in the stretch and straight away to win easily. MILLAR BOY tried to win going away. WILLIN GIRL raced forwardly, took command at the last turn and, when challenged, faltered when PUAN DANCE was outrun early, moved up forwardly, tired in the last quarter. MARCH WIND was never a serious threat. MOSSIE showed early speed. GREAT FORTUNE tired quickly after leading to the first turn. THE WAY failed to make up when Stage Fortune was in trouble.

Shaw, Olynyk Challenge Sunday For Eaton Trophy

Harry Shaw and Pete Olynyk, of the Highlands club, will be the challengers on Sunday afternoon for the Eaton golf trophy held by Bob Proctor and Ted West, of Mayfair.

The Highlanders are one of the strongest threats that the Mayfair pair have met recently and some mighty crisp golf should be turned on. The match also is of particular interest since 3 victories for the defenders will give them 12 consecutive wins for this trophy and equal the record set by the Martell brothers.

EXPLANATION OF TODAY'S CARTOON

THE BLIND BUILDER: Joe Powell, who completely lost his sight in 1926, built a seven-room house for himself and his family seven years later. He cut, fitted and nailed together the entire building, and he also did all the plumber-boarding and roofing. The house is well and comfortably built, and is in good condition. While he was building the house, his neighbors offered to help him, but Joe Powell declined with thanks.

ALL-AUSSIE NET FINAL EXPECTED

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 19—The men's United States doubles tennis tournament appeared headed for an all-Australian final last night after Jack Crawford and Harry Hopman, from down under, disposed of the top-ranking home breds, Frank Parker and Don McNeill, with the greatest of ease in the semi-finals.

All that is necessary to turn the 58-year-old tournament into an Australian Davis cup team workout is for Adrian Quist and Jack Bromwich, to score triumph over Bobby Riggs and Elmwood Cooke, the Wimbledon champions, today.

CIVIL SERVICE DOUBLES MEET OPENS SUNDAY

Two-Day Tennis Program Billed for Week-End At 106 St. Courts

A small but select entry will start the Civil Service Tennis Club's annual doubles tournament on the weekend. New teams will feature the tournament and one of the best net meets is in the offing.

Last year's winners, Jimmy Hoyle and Allan Thomas will not be together as the team broke up when Thomas went to live at the coast. Fred Parsons is engaged with Hoyle to make one of the seeded teams.

Johnny Stott, recently crowned provincial junior champion, is teaming with another junior, Gil Dodge to make a strong pair.

Harvey Normington and Dr. Hal Richard, city open semi-finalists and Doug Cave and Ken Taylor are the other seeded pairs.

The women's doubles is suffering from a paucity of entries and until there are more their draws will be held up.

Bitter rivalry is almost certain for both games as these teams have been rivals for long enough.

Gets Place Slot When Favorite Loses Rider

By BILL LEWIS

BIGGEST quinella pay-off of Edmonton's second summer race meeting came yesterday when Wells Gray, longest shot in the seventh race, bounced down to take place money after the heavily-played favorite, Stage Fortune, had lost its rider on the first turn of the mile and one-sixteenth event. Wells Gray thus paired with the winning Masked Revue for the quinella combination and each ticket on these two was worth $223.40 to lucky holders.

Biggest mutuel payee of the day was also paid on Wells Gray. Those who had invested in two-dollar place tickets on the nine-year old getting received a return of $44.60 while show tickets brought $10.60 at the gay wickets. Pagan Dance, third in the same race, provided the second best return of the day by paying $16.30 to its show backers.

Stage Fortune, heavily backed both in quinella and mutuel betting, stumbled and fell as the field hit the first turn. Jockey Harvey Dunton, who had the mount, went down with him and it appeared that the rider would be seriously hurt. However, after a medical check-up it was found that Dunton had received no serious injuries and he was reported O.K. physically last night.

FORMFUL RACING

With the exception of Wells Gray's surprise in the last race, form players had a field day at the Exhibition track yesterday, no less than three favorites and two second favorites scoring during the afternoon's program.

Feature event of the card, the Hopeful Purse for three-year-olds, foaled in Western Canada, saw F. F. Montague's Four Clubs beat out Marion Somers in a thrilling stretch drive. The horses hit the wire nose and nose and a picture was required to decide the winner. Beauty Warm was seven lengths back in third slot.

Four Clubs went to the post a 4-5 favorite and finished second to the backers only $3.30 straight, $2.70 place and $2.30 show.

Red Flight, heavy favorite in the first race, and Weecarol, also well liked by the punters in the third heat, came through with victories but only the winning daily double combination, which paid off at $41.90.

CLAIMS CAVE BOY

Early bonus of the day were shared by Tiny Everett, Ralph Noel-son and Johnny Coumanis each of whom rode two winners. M. Dello Valle's only other ride was third with Si Sis credit.

Cave Boy, the four-year-old gelding, finished out of the money at the third race yesterday but was claimed from Mrs. H. Bideaux of Calgary, by T. H. Morrison, well-known Airdrie owner.

It requires 10 times as many mots to haul a given amount of freight over the highways as it does when hauled by the same amount over rails.

CALGARY HOPES TO WIN SOCCER ROUND TONIGHT

CALGARY, Aug. 19—Manager Jimmy Baker today was confident his Calgary Callies could overcome the three-goal advantage held by Edmonton Civics when the two teams meet tonight in the last of a home-and-home intoligal series. Civics took the first a week ago at Edmonton 5-2.

Baker's optimism was built on the fact Callies on a season basis outplayed their best footballs when forced to come from behind, and Edmonton Callies will be at full strength for the match.

Chuck Ogilvie considered one of the best forwards on the prairies who was forced out of last season's game with an ankle injury, returned and Rod Sutherland will be back at centre-half, the manager said.

PROBABLE LINEUPS

Edmonton: Sons, Hart, Dunsford; Lawson, Sutherland, McLeod; Hamilton, Stephenson, Nicholson, Stott, Mc-Kay, Hall and Ogilvie.

Calgary: Mather, Mitchell; Hall, Hunter, Hamilton; Cowie, Sutherland, McKay; Ogilvie, Peter Wilson, Arnold Sutherland, Gordon Wilson, Bob Wilson, Sabo, Lane, West, Mackinnon, Baker.

Referee: Bert Hall.

Highway Marking Is Undertaken By Auto Association

Re-marking of highways to Wastakenau, Vilna, St. Paul, Cold Lake, Mundare, Vegreville, Two Hills and Brosseau has been completed, the Alberta Motor Association reported Saturday. Marking in other districts between highway 15 and 16 is expected to be completed by the Associations time period.

CONSPIRACY PROCEEDINGS GIVEN STAY

Stay of proceedings in the charge of conspiracy against James Brown was granted by Mr. Justice Howson, at the request of J. W. McClung, K.C., crown prosecutor here in criminal court Friday afternoon.

Brown was sent up for trial on a charge of having conspired to obtain $2,000 by fraud from Joseph Tower, aged Sexsmith farmer, after a preliminary hearing before Magistrate A. I. Miller here on July 5.

It was alleged that Brown, with "Happy" Stearns and George Davidson, had enticed the elderly man into a card game and then after getting him intoxicated had duped him of his roll. Davidson was dismissed when he appeared for preliminary hearing of the charge in police court earlier this week.

EDMONTON BULLETIN.

Dear Sirs:

"This ad was originally carried by us in the Winnipeg Free Press. Then we received your invitation to run it in your paper, which we did for a three-day period. As a result of your ad Mr. E. Litchfield of 306 Bank of Commerce Bldg., phoned me long distance and a few minutes later I was on the train to Edmonton, purchased an Elevator from him and returned last night. Thought you might be interested in the good work this little ad performed for Mr. Litchfield and my firm."

Yours very truly,

Edmonton Wheat Prices Decrease

Edmonton wheat prices, received Friday by local grain companies from the grain board, show a substantial decrease under last year's prices. Garnet has fallen off 14 cents to a present price of 41½ cents and No. 1 Northern, 63½ cents to 33½ cents.

Prices are based on a 70-cent minimum at Canadian terminals. Last year's minimum was 80 cents.

No prices were quoted here since August 1 when old prices were discontinued. Although companies were unable to purchase, grain was stored at elevators and farmers given storage checks until the new prices were received.

Broomhall

The demoralized condition of the Liverpool and Rotterdam wheat futures markets is entirely a result of surplus dumping by export countries to aid their own farmers by supporting the domestic price and forcing the unwanted surplus on an already oversupplied European market. With northern hemisphere countries now receiving their new crops which have to last for 12 months, there is naturally much selling pressure which should dissipate itself as the season progresses. Some authorities expect the U.S. to allow a subsidy of around 35 cents a bushel depending upon the price of cash wheat from time to time, Canada about 20 cents. Argentine is paying the farmers 59½ cents and selling the wheat to exporters today at 4.50 pesos at Buenos Aires, which is equal to 38¼ cents, which means a subsidy of around 21¼ cents.

to Judge at the World's Congress. And it brought him a 6,000-mile trip through the United States, including visits to both the World's Fairs at San Francisco and at New York.

Mr. Henbest, who returned to Edmonton from Cleveland last week-end, judged S.C. Black Minorcas, Black-breasted Red Malays, Pit Games, Blue Red Americans, Blue Pyles, C.E. Greys, A.O.C. Old English, Cornish and Cornish bantams at the Congress. An Old English Game hen exhibited by Mr. Henbest captured first prize and "best bird" in her class at the Congress.

23,000 BIRDS

There were 25,000 birds on display at the Congress, one of the finest exhibitions ever held in the seven years of the Congress. During the first four days of the Congress, which was held from July 27 to August 8, a total of 300,000 people paid admission to the grounds, with 117,000 passing through the turnstiles on Canada Day.

One of the most interesting displays at the Congress was a transparent kitchen showing the latest and best methods of killing, cleaning and dressing.

CANADA FEATURES

"Canada made a wonderful showing at the Congress," said Mr. Henbest. The musical ride given by the R.C.M.P., the playing of the Saskatoon Girls' Pipe Band and the Canadian government display featuring wild fowl in the Dominion, were recognized by all visitors at the Congress as some of the finest and most outstanding features of the exhibition, he said.

Further honor was given to Mr. Henbest and to Alberta, when he was appointed to the American Poultry Association's new committee for the coming year. He was also made a member of the American Poultry Association.

Born at Southampton, Eng., one of the largest seaports in the world, Mr. Henbest was given an early grounding in the poultry breeding by his father and mother both of whom took a keen interest in the raising of fine fowl.

ESCAPES DISASTER

An important decision to breed Canada...owed Mr. Henbest from the Titanic disaster in the spring of 1912. Together with four companions, Mr. Henbest booked passage on the giant luxury liner for its maiden voyage to America. Then finding that he could get a boat exactly three days earlier, he cancelled his passage for the later boat.

His four companions determined to make the trip on the Titanic and perished when the "unsinkable" liner struck an iceberg and sank, while Mr. Henbest reached Canada safely. He came to Edmonton in 1914.

For several years Mr. Henbest worked as foreman of the production departments at Burns' and Swift packing plants. Later he turned his entire interests to the breeding and exhibiting of fowl and of judging.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Henbest, who also takes a keen interest in poultry exhibiting, have taken a major share of awards in the poultry exhibition held each year in connection with the Edmonton exhibition. Mr. Henbest's extensive circuit of the poultry show committee at the exhibition.

During the past few years, Mr. Henbest has carried invaluable reputation as a poultry judge in America. For the past three years he has judged at the Calgary poultry show as well as a position and judging throughout the province.

Two years ago he attended the Royal exhibition at Toronto and there sat for a written and practical exam for judging. He passed with flying colors and became a member of the American Association of American Poultry Judges. It is believed that there are only three other men living in the Dominion who have become members of the judges' association by passing the rigid examinations although several other Canadians have been admitted as members in recognition of their long years of service as breeders and judges.

Ability to pass the exams set by the judges association is in itself a task requiring several years study and experience. To pass, the writer must be able to distinguish between the 168 varieties of birds and must be able to pick out the 35 general disqualifications and 50 defects noted for each class. Then there is the little matter of scoring, with each disqualification and defect having a set number of points to be chalked up against the bird being judged.

No wonder there are only four living Canadians who have passed the exam!

CHOICE TABLE FOWL

Most families have large gardens for vegetables and flowers in their yards. Not the Henbest family. All available space is taken up with hen houses and chicken runs. Mr. Henbest has about 200 fowl in his present flock. He specializes in Old English Games, Pit Games and Cornish Game fowl. He believes that the Old English Games make the choicest table fowl in the world.

Mr. Henbest paid particular tribute to a display of Partridge Chanticlers which were exhibited at the world's congress in Cleveland by Mrs. J. E. Wilkinson of Edmonton, wife of the late Dr. J. E. Wilkinson, originator of the birds. The birds were formerly known as Albertans.

Others attending the congress from Edmonton were C. W. Traves, poultry commissioner for Alberta; R. S. Ennismore, Dominion senior poultry field man; R. S. Johnston and G. M. Cormie.

Fall Tang In Air Saturday; Weather Clear

The fall tang becoming so common of late was more pronounced Saturday morning. It might have been caused by the mercury sinking to within four degrees of the freezing line at 5:30 a.m. It was 36 above.

High temperatures for Edmonton Friday was a comparatively modest 67 above.

Chill breezes were whipping over the city Saturday morning when the weatherman penned his cheery message to week-end holidayers. Weather over the week-end, he wrote, will be fair and moderately cool.

The "mostly clear" sign was hung out in the near northern regions around 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Temperatures at the same time varied from 45 to 58 above.

NEWFOUNDLAND
"Cabot" Issue—1897.

The Interesting Cabot Series, issued on April 24, 1897, to commemorate the 400th anniversary of Queen Victoria's accession to the throne, and the 400th anniversary of the discovery of the island of Newfoundland (Great Britain's oldest colony) by John Cabot. The stamps were printed by the American Bank Note Co. of New York, U.S.A., in sheets of 100 subjects, were line engraved, and perforated 12, single line

1c, deep green (400,000), Queen Victoria.

2c, carmine-lake (400,000), John Cabot.

3c, ultramarine (1,000,000), Cape Bonavista.

4c olive green (400,000), Caribou Hunting.

5c, violet (400,000), Mining.

6c, red-brown (400,000), Logging.

8c, red-orange (200,000), Fishing.

10c, black - brown (200,000), Cabot's Ship, "Matthew".

12c, dark blue (200,000), Parliament Building (grouse).

15c, scarlet (200,000), Seals.

24c, gray-violet (100,000), Salmon Fishing.

30c, slate (100,000), Seal of the Colony—"Fisherman Bringing Gifts to Britannia."

35c, red (100,000), Iceberg off St. John's.

60c, black (100,000), King Henry VII.

All dies, rolls and plates were destroyed on June 23, 1897, and on Jan. 4, 1900, the following remainders were burned: 3c—2,656; 8c—13,342. Other "remainders" were used as "provisionals" by surcharging and overprinting, and after $153,000 face value had been declared they were sold by the Collector at St. John's at 10% below face value. This defacing was done by using the cancelling stamp "St. John's, N.F.", with the date (10 bars lines in centre) "Nov.-26-1897" applied in red, once to each block of four stamps.

Three of the values are illustrated today, i.e., the 3, 6, and 8 cent stamps. The 30c stamp brings the highest price from collectors as many copies were used as provisionals, leaving the normal stamp comparatively scarce. Used copies are worth about 75 per cent. of unused (mint) copies.

There has been a steady advance in price of this issue for many years and it is suggested that readers will get their set soon, the probable cost being from 10 to 15 dollars per set, "according to condition."

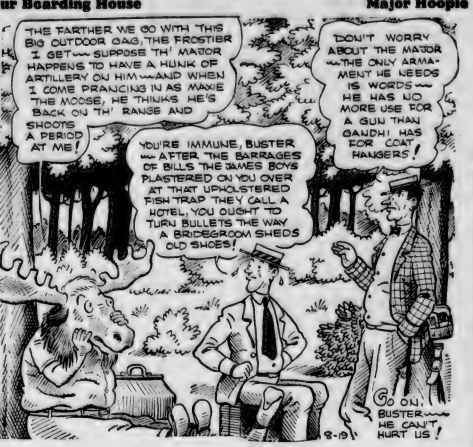

For beginners, a few packets of 15 different stamps of this country are available at 25 cents. These are good value.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

by Wilfred Ferguson

SATURN.

MOST INTERESTING PLANET IN THE HEAVENS, DUE TO ITS SYSTEM OF RINGS... A FEATURE WHICH NO OTHER KNOWN CELESTIAL BODY POSSESSES. THE ANCIENTS NAMED IT AFTER THE GOD OF TIME.

THE MARVELOUS RINGS ARE COMPOSED OF MILLIONS OF MINUTE SATELLITES... EACH PERHAPS NO LARGER THAN A GRAIN OF SAND... SWARMING IN STEADY STREAMS AROUND THE PLANET. A CLEAR SPACE OF SEVEN THOUSAND MILES SEPARATES THE RINGS FROM THE MAIN BODY.

THE PLANET, BEING SOME 800 MILLION MILES FROM THE EARTH, MOVES AROUND THE SUN BUT ONCE IN 29½ YEARS/ IT IS A PALE YELLOWISH COLOR.

SATURN'S DIAMETER OF 71,500 MILES IS ABOUT NINE TIMES THAT OF THE EARTH. CURIOUSLY, THE PLANET HAS A DENSITY ONLY ABOUT ONE-EIGHTH THAT OF OUR OWN GLOBE, AND ACTUALLY WOULD FLOAT IN WATER.

SINCE SATURN'S RINGS ARE INCLINED TO THE PLANE OF ITS ORBIT, WE GET A CHANGING VIEW AS THE PLANET MOVES AROUND THE SUN:

SOMETIMES LIKE THIS...

OR THIS...

OR, THIS...
